Congratulations to the graduating members of Northeastern University's Class of 1970. You have been witness during your college years to the most profound, far-reaching revolution ever to confront the American educational system. In spite of its tendencies toward unlawful extremism, so often manifested by violence and physical confrontations, this upheaval will engender a new era on our campuses in student-university relations.

Already students are enjoying more decision-making power in our colleges and universities than they have ever had in the past. This is as it should be. The voicing of opinions, particularly relevant to student life on campus, are rights, not extended privileges. Administrations recognize this. Administrations encourage students to recognize it also, but to make their voices heard through the system of due process inherent in our democratic way of life.

It is essential that student participation in university affairs increase in the years ahead, and I am confident it will do so. The opinions of all elements of an academic community—students, faculty, administration and trustees—are vital to any institution's successfully fulfilling its role and carrying out its overall educational mission.

Responsible, mature reactions to complex problems are now what you must develop as you take your places as new leaders in society. The education you have received at Northeastern, strengthened by your cooperative experience, makes me feel confident that most of you have already done so.

My sincerest wishes to you in the years ahead.

ASA S. KNOWLES
President

To The Class of 1970:

Commencement 1970—the time of many beginnings.

After working with you for five years, it seems unnecessary to say "Congratulations," but what other word can express the good wishes I want for each of you.

September, 1965, is long past, and now, June, 1970, which seemed like an eternity away, is upon us. The common thread that held the Class of 1970 together has dissolved into a new bond of remembrances.

As each of you go your separate ways you take a part of me and a part of Northeastern. We will, each in our own way, share in your disappointments and rejoice in your success.

Go In Peace!

Carl Ell watched Northeastern grow from a small college into the largest private university in the country. And he helped it along the way. It is hard to think of this man as ever having been a student, but once he even played basketball for De Pauw University. Pictured above is the 1908-09 team. Dr. Ell is seated, far left.

Dedication:

OUR TIME

You were the War Babies, The Spock Generation, the first to live entirely under the threat of The Bomb. And then the time came for you to take your place in the world, eventually to take it over to do with as you pleased.

In 1970, it was not an Eden you stepped into, but, rather, a world torn by dissent and political strife, a nation whose houses were divided, then divided again over many and diverse problems.

You did many funny things. You did some violent things. Your opinions and actions began to carry weight. College students were no longer the goldfish-swallowing, careless types of the 20's and 30's. They were no longer the apathetic generation of the 50's, but rather, an involved, dynamic, energetic, concerned group of students who were searching for a new way of life, although that new life never was clearly defined.

This is your yearbook. It is quite different from any other. It may shock you. It may offend you. It may tickle you. It may be nothing what you thought your college career was like. But it happened, and you were part of it.

This is dedicated to you—after all, you wrote it.

A Time for Us

A History 1965-1970

> It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of Light, it was the season of Darkness, it was the spring of Hope, it was the winter of Despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us . . .

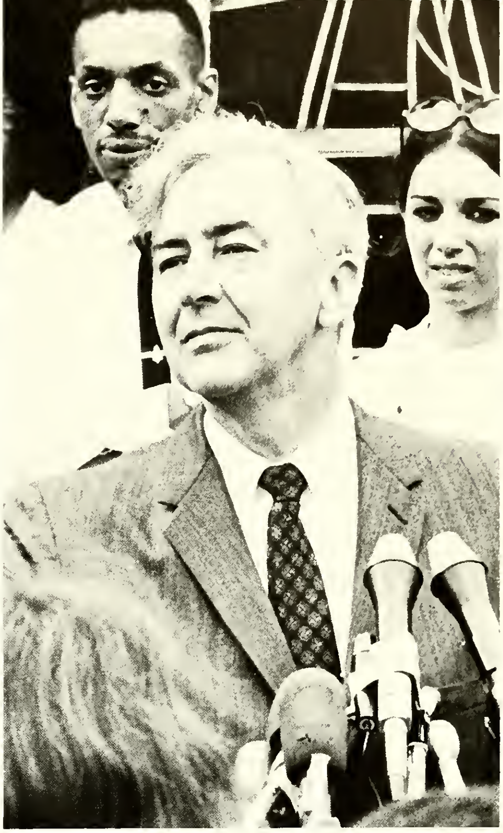
We came seeking an education, and learned of our ignorance, we came as the little children, and left doubting salvation; we came to be called college graduates, and some of us learned a few things.

The importance of the past five years has been, for anyone with a concern for his world as well as his niche, a time of crisis, of searching, of national guilt, national questioning. Its importance has been in the streets as often as in the halls of government; its events will change the whole structure of our lives and those of later generations. And those who feel unchanged by this mid-century sweep of social upheaval have been at least half asleep.

The last half-decade, the time we spent getting an education, has been one of protest and challenge, of confrontation, both of people and of ideologies, a time of war, of sexual liberty, of struggles for rights, or moral questioning, of hatred and guilt and sometimes, of innocence.

And whether we are, as a nation, plummeting to anarchy, or rising to a new freedom, we, as a generation, are "changed, changed utterly," like Yeats' middle class; and perhaps, as in his time of struggle, "a terrible beauty is born."



We have lingered in the chambers of the sea
By sea-girls wreathed with seaweed red and brown
Till human voices wake us, and we drown.

VIETNAM: Our flag was still there

"If everybody minded their own business," said the Duchess in a hoarse growl, "the world would go round a deal faster than it does."

—Lewis Carroll, Alice in Wonderland

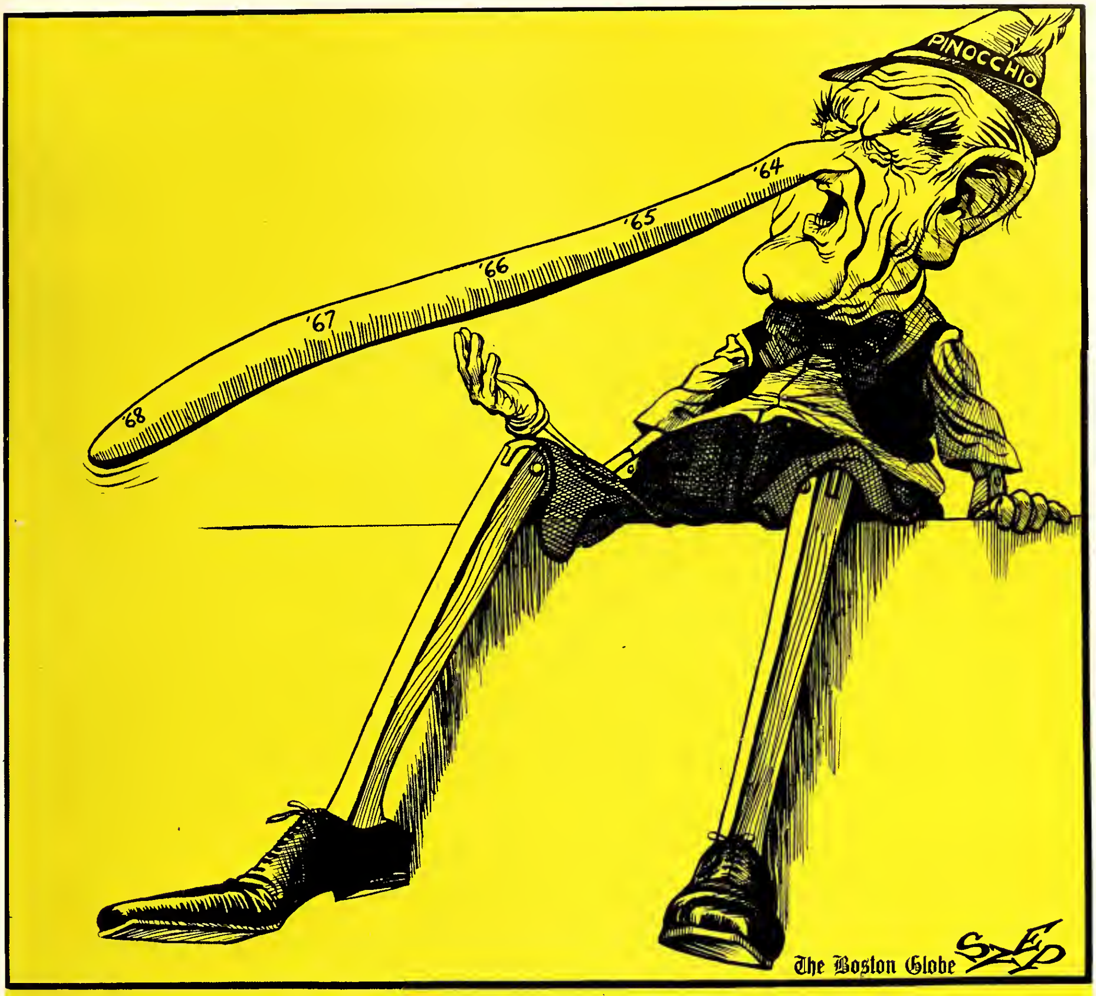
Most Americans supported US intervention in Vietnam in 1965. By 1970, most of them wanted to withdraw, to turn the war over to the Vietnamese Army. For the young people and the "effete corps of impudent snobs" who were the target of Vice President Spiro Agnew's jabs, it was none too soon.

The difference in American opinion seemed multifold. It was, some thought, an immoral, illegal war that went against American beliefs, not to mention being in violation of the UN Charter; it was, some felt, a civil war between two halves of a single country divided only for the 1956 Geneva Convention elections (which had not been held); it was, others said, a recognition of the fact, conceded by Eisenhower, that in free elections, Ho Chi Minh, a national hero for having driven out the French, would win.

But most Americans had no idea of the legal and political intricacies in the Vietnam question. For them, the change came as the numbers of American soldiers killed kept increasing, as everyone who was anyone stopped citing the Domino theory of Communist aggression, as Johnson got caught in lie after lie and spread the "credibility gap" wider and wider.

It began with the President's statement during the 1964 election campaign that he would not send American troops to do what the Asians "ought to be doing for themselves," and with the contradictory US military buildup, explained as reaction to attacks from the North, as part of the US commitment to a SEATO ally, and as retaliation for Communist attacks on US vessels. But the hope, ill-founded or not, that the Kennedy years had given the nation, the optimism of the younger generation, was lost in the Johnson years. And all youth could see was hypocrisy, duplicity and rationalization from an administration that had tread too deeply into the Mekong Delta and got itself and a half million soldiers stuck.



"WE ARE NOT GOING TO SEND AMERICAN BOYS 9000 OR 10,000 MILES AWAY TO DO WHAT ASIAN BOYS OUGHT TO BE DOING FOR THEMSELVES"—LYNDON JOHNSON (1964 CAMPAIGN)

Among the older generation, the question of Vietnam was generally one of "honor." The United States had never been defeated in a war, never quit a war without winning, never been made to look foolish, at least not in their selected memories. At first, our elders had a clearly-defined group to rail against—the "hippies," who, for them, were obviously cowards, unwilling to fight against Communist domination. But as the word "escalation" became commonplace, as "we're winning" became "we're holding our own," and then, "bombing must be resumed," the pacifists looked less like Communist dupes, the objectives went cloudy, and the price of "stopping Communism" began to seem too high.

True, the US had had personnel in Vietnam since Truman first dispatched a handful of military instructors in 1950 to train troops for the French puppet Vietnamese government. But the big war, for the United States, did not begin until huge numbers of troops, on Johnson's orders, arrived in Vietnam to take over the shooting, and the dying.

In late July, 1964, Hanoi accused US ships of violating North Vietnamese waters. On August 2, North Vietnamese torpedo boats attacked a US destroyer in the Gulf of Tonkin, in what the US maintained were international waters. After a second similar incident, Johnson ordered bombing attacks on shore installations, noted that the US had been the victim of deliberate aggression, said that "peace is the only purpose of the course we pursue," and ordered air raids on North Vietnam. Congress passed the Tonkin Gulf Resolution, giving Johnson a free hand, the Viet Cong hit the American installation at Pleiku, and Johnson ordered round-the-clock strikes on the North.

For the next two years, peace proposals were offered and rejected by both sides, the US holding that the National Liberation Front could not justifiably represent South Vietnam in peace talks, and the North holding that US troops were the true aggressors and would have to withdraw before talks could begin. Meanwhile, reports of new US troop buildups in Vietnam became commonplace, and the nation began its division into "hawks" and "doves," the "peaceniks" and the "militarists." As US troop strength increased, so did protests; as Gen. William C. Westmoreland began to order "search and destroy" missions, draft card burning increased; as bombing halts were ordered, then bombing resumed, self-immolation, flag-burning, draft resistance and emmigration to seek sanctuary increased.

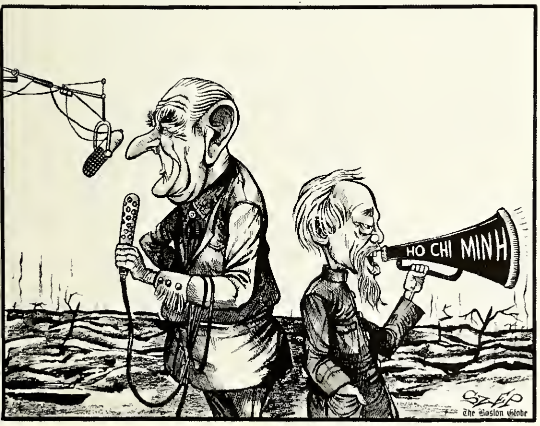
'All I Can Tell You Is That We're Winning'



Then, in 1968, the war and the mood of the nation began to change. On January 30, the North Vietnamese launched the Tet offensive, striking 30 cities at once and killing over 400 Americans. On March 31, President Johnson pre-empted part of "Mission Impossible" to announce that his administration would self-destruct in nine months.

Johnson ordered unilateral reductions in war activity, halted bombing over most of North Vietnam, and called upon the North to begin peace negotiations. On April 3, North Vietnam agreed to meet at Paris; and though South Vietnam still had an election scandal brewing, and despite reluctance on the part of newly-elected South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu to enter the talks, there seemed to be cause to hope for the end.

But the delegates to the peace talks spent their first few months discussing the shape of the conference table, and Americans, tired of war, turned to their own political machinations. For the next several months, the nation was wrapped up in the McCarthy success, the Robert Kennedy murder, the Chicago Democratic Convention scandal, the charges and countercharges between the television media and Chicago officials. And while Democratic nominee Hubert Humphrey tried to explain his position to a nation disenchanted with Johnson, Richard Nixon took the Presidency with the pledge that "the new leadership will end the war and win the peace in the Pacific."

But during his first several months, Nixon appeared to make little progress, and an increasing number of adults joined a growing majority of youth in demanding withdrawal from Vietnam. For the first time since the war began, "pacifist" meant more to the American mind than long-haired, pot-smoking, bead-swinging college kids. For some, anti-war people were still "cowards," but now there were old, respectable, sometimes famous "cowards" as well as young, irresponsible ones. Peace demonstrations no longer bore the stigma of "treason."

Nixon had been in office eight months without what the peace marchers felt was sufficient action, when much of the nation joined the youth in Vietnam Peace Action Day (Oct. 15, 1969), a nationwide demonstration for peace greatly increased by Nixon's politically unfortunate comment that "under no circumstances will I be affected whatever" by the moratorium march.

The march brought an immediate reaction from loyal GOP senators, who called for a moratorium on criticism of Nixon for 60 days, a proposal rejected immediately by the marchers. And, after the announcement that another demonstration was planned for November, criticism grew stronger from Vice President Spiro Agnew, whose vituperation had become a mark of pride among his targets. Agnew opined that the peace movement came from "a spirit of national masochism" and was carried out by "an effete corps of impudent snobs" who felt "the need to cleanse themselves of their lack of ability to offer a constructive solution to the problem." Nixon would take no credit either for Agnew's mixed metaphors or the vice president's opinion, and was quick to announce that though Agnew showed courage both in his anti-protest and anti-television speeches, the vice president spoke for himself.

Between Nixon's "under no circumstances" statement and Agnew's "effete corps" denunciation, many middle-of-the-roaders joined the peace camp. And Agnew's prediction that "hard-core dissidents and anarchists" were planning a "wider more violent" march the next month brought a pacifist chuckle as the November 15 march on Washington first was forbidden, then allowed, then carried out with no violence from the pacifists, and little from other elements.

The war that was costing $2 billion a month, that had cost 45,000 American lives, that had cost more casualties than World War I, was the single most important issue in the past half-decade. And at the end of the decade, it was still that.

The Dissidence of Dissent

We came, many of us, with the hairbrained liberal ideas of the high school graduate suddenly at the university. We listened to the cant of professors and elders the first year; we listened to the cant of each other for the next four. Most of us went further left; some went right in reaction, and many remained a part of what Nixon liked to call the Silent Majority.

We were the New Left and the New Right, though. We were not Roosevelt liberals or Southern Conservatives. We were Kennedy liberals, McCarthy liberals, Goldwater and Buckley conservatives. We read and heard what comforted our views and sometimes some of us made an act of committal.

There was, for the Left, a growing dissatisfaction with American society; there was, for the right, a dissatisfaction with the Left. Some said we were "polarized" like the rest of the nation. But for most of us, injustice, materialism, hypocrisy, war, the data-processed identity, the anguish of the black man, the anger of the poor were all things that needed righting. And not at some misty future time that would never come.

Oh never fear, man, nought's to dread
In all the endless road you tread
There's nothing but the night.
—A. E. Housman

For the Left, there was grass, there were bennies, there was acid, there was stronger stuff: for some, the stuff that dreams are made on and for others, the stuff that hopes are maimed on. There was sex, legal, illegal, perverted, subverted. For the right, there was opposition to some of these things, a sometimes anguished concern for American decadence, and a cry for sanity, though the definition of that value changed with the issue.

And issues abounded, for both sides. There was, above all and pervading all, the war. There was the draft, poverty, civil rights, birth control, abortion, student power, black power, white power, Red power, atomic power. There were politics and pollution, ROTC and racism; there were media being messages and messages being media. And for all there were the ugly Americans, the bringers of evil, though ugliness and evil were generally defined as the other side.

For the Left, the more popular side among the young, there was the Organization Left, the SDS, the group that splintered into left, far left, and exceedingly far left. For the Right, there was the YAF, though its efforts at countermarches generally attracted veterans instead of students, and not many of those. But for many at Northeastern, there was middle-of-the-road safety and there was apathy, at least until Vietnam grew too hot, deferment time ran out, and the numbers in Nixon's lottery kept coming up.

Escalation joined the American vocabulary, protest became a reaction to it, and for some reason, the pacifists wore Army jackets. Sideburns grew longer each year; the NEWS went too far left for some and not far enough for others; and while some professors signed newspaper ads damning the war, others examined the provisions of their research grants and kept their mouths shut. Then, in 1968, there was the snit at Brandeis, another at Harvard, and a little loud whispering at N.U., the nation's largest school.

There were questions of academic freedom, of peace and war, of rights and restrictions. And though many took time to observe that, if nothing else, the students of the 60s at least had greater intellectual involvement than previous generations, the Left was quick to add that the war and the Northeastern Turtle Race went on as scheduled despite all the supposed soul-searching.

For what seemed to be much of a generation, though, there was a gap, an inability to comprehend, an "inability to communicate" between the young and its authority figures. There was the "sexual revolution" for the young and corollary proposals to stamp out smut for the old; there were demands for legalizing drugs among the young; and a sometimes hysterical demand for drug law enforcement among the old. There was the "God is Dead" controversy, an odd rejuvenation of high moral standards among a generation which said it didn't believe, matched by an equally odd utilitarianism among a generation which said it did. It was a time of Johnson and of Nixon, of pacifism and militarism, of inflation and poverty and wealth, of a search for the truth, and the discovery of the big lie.

We came with our ideas, and they were changed by our peers, our professors, and ourselves. We saw things that delighted us, but too much that horrified us. We knew, those of us who thought deeply, the feeling of intellectual agony and social impotence. We heard the voice of the prophets and tried to separate the false ones. We saw things we deplored, if we tried hard enough, and tried to change them if we cared enough to make a committal.

1965: The Disillusionment Began

1965 was the year the American public noticed Vietnam, the year American youth noticed Lyndon Johnson, and the year Lyndon Johnson began his decline and fall. It was the year the President pushed tuition aid programs, but doubled the draft call; the year they put copper in the coins and took romance out of the cigarette. It was the year Cassius Clay knocked Sonny Liston out in a minute, the year the Queen decorated the Beatles, the year of the grannydress and of the Northeast Blackout. It was the time of "Goldfinger," and the Smothers Brothers, of peacemarches and "Support the Boys in Vietnam" bumper stickers. It marked the end of the New York World's Fair, and many felt, the start of the pan-Johnson circus.

In the beginning was the word: Lyndon (LBJ for the USA) Johnson had a mandate in the 1964 election, though many argued that his landslide victory was more a rejection of Republican Conservative Barry (In your heart, you know he's right) Goldwater than approval of Kennedy's Texan. At last President in his own right, Johnson began his Great Society drive with a stream of messages to Congress for emergency legislation, and told the American people of the "peace offensives" his administration was making to end the Vietnam war by negotiation.

But the war offensives got more attention. In June, 1964, there had been 15,000 US soldiers in Vietnam; in December, 22,000; and by the end of 1965, 200,000, with greater increases planned. As the war escalated, so did the protests, the demonstrations, the teach-ins. Yet at year's end, pollsters still gave LBJ the edge of support among the voters, and protestors were still labeled "cowards" in many circles.

1965 marked the centennial of the Civil War, too. But that era's optimistic prophecies for the black man's future had been painful delusions. Despite Supreme Court rulings in the black's favor, he was neither equal nor happy. Northerners expressed shock at the Southern attitude toward him, but continued their own arm's-length policy. But though the black American didn't yet have his freedom, he made it clear in 1965 that he intended to get it, and keep it.

From January to March, protestors gathered in Selma, Alabama to demand equality for blacks, and brought about the Voting Rights Act of 1965. In July, the first law banning discrimination in employment went into effect, and officials promised to desegregate the schools promptly.

But the scandal that surrounded the Selma incidents following Gov. George (Don't lay down in front of my car) Wallace's orders to the Alabama state police to harass marchers, the increased activity of the Ku Klux Klan, leading to a Congressional investigation, and the murder of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, a worker in Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, replaced the good feeling that came from rights progress with bitterness over the continuing racism in the nation. The first riots in reaction to it came in the Watts section of Los Angeles in August.

LBJ placed the Alabama National Guard under federal orders to stop Wallace's state police; he pushed his "war on poverty," and set up a Department of Housing and Urban Development. But many still felt that the evils of Johnson's foreign policy outweighed even the best accomplishments of his domestic one. He took personal interest in the Great Society, but also made the selection of bombing sites in North Vietnam his personal decision; he began the federal work-study program, but also signed Presidential orders cutting draft deferments, making it illegal to burn draft cards, and doubling the draft call. By year's end, he may still have had the majority's trust, but a significant minority of the American people were growing dissatisfied with the "lesser of two evils" they had elected.

1965 was the year Rhodesia declared its independence from Britain, rather than give its four million blacks a share in a country run by 217,000 whites. It was the year of a parade of governments in South Vietnam, ending with Nguyen Cao Ky as victor, the year the Congolese war officially ended in favor of the government, and the year China tested its second atomic bomb. It was the year the Catholic Church's Vatican Council absolved the Jews of collective guilt for Christ's crucifixion, and the year Pope Paul VI became the first Pontiff to visit the New World.

Speaking before the United Nations in October, the Pope pleaded for "no more war; never again war."

He received polite applause.

1966: "We will continue"

> "A slow sort of country!" said the Queen. "Now here, you see, it takes all the running you can do, to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast as that."
> —Lewis Carroll, Through the Looking Glass

1966 was the year eight student nurses were murdered in Chicago, the year China's "Red Guards" began their Cultural Revolution, the year de Gaulle told NATO to get out, and the year the United States lost an atomic bomb off Spain. It was the year Massachusetts elected Edward Brooke the first black senator since Reconstruction, and the year Stokely Carmichael called for "Black Power." It was the year Johnson went to Vietnam, the year of a birth control drive in India, and the year France and China rattled their atomic bombs in harmony. It was a time of "guns and butter," of Ronald Reagan as a governor, of a 30-million-man Chinese militia, and of US Supreme Court rulings that contradicted some policemens' concept of law and order. It was the year Charles Whitman climbed the U. of Texas tower and killed 15 people, and the year Johnson assured us we were not collectively insane.

China's ritual rejection from the United Nations gained little notice, but she made headlines with the testing of her fourth nuclear device, detonated only three months after France's testing had brought her undeniably into the world nuclear club. The fact that France had recognized Mao's China the year before despite US protests, did little to shore up failing French-American relations, and the "allies" seemed parted after French President Charles de Gaulle quit NATO and ordered members' troops out of France. In mid-year, Mao Tse Tung's Red Guards began a nationwide search and purge of "revisionists," in China and school openings were delayed into the next year while unorthodox thinkers were corrected.

In the U.S., it was the year the Supreme Court endeared itself to liberals in the Miranda ruling, but pleased "law and order" elements in obscenity decisions. In the Miranda vs. Arizona case, the court said arrested persons must be fully and effectively warned of their rights, including the right to remain silent and the right to a lawyer before questioning, guarantees of considerable impact for some police who, according to some lawyers, wanted to enforce the rules but didn't want to play by them.

—and the Beatles came to Boston (Courtesy Boston Record American)

But the court did not swing to the left in obscenity decisions, and many liberals found parallels between the prosecution of authors Andrei Sinyavski and Yuli Daniel in Russia and those of the publisher of Eros magazine and sellers of Fanny Hill in the United States. The Eros case was among the first in which the court found a publication "obscene," and although the same court reversed a Massachusetts law under which the 18th Century Fanny Hill was banned, it still held the book obscene on the basis of promotional advertising.

The question of "redeeming social value" in art also affected the motion picture industry, which adopted a "code" to rate films according to the degree of maturity expected of the audience. But as the rating was self-applied by the film-makers, the questions of censorship and freedom of expression remained.

Politically, the Vietnam conflict helped the decline of President Johnson's popularity, and even his much-touted trip to visit the troops there didn't help much. His January pronouncement that the nation could afford both "guns and butter" was to echo across the nation's editorial pages as Vietnam cost more and more in money and lives, and as inflation cut deeper into the dollar's value. What was more, Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy emerged from three years of secluded widowhood and promptly had a nasty argument with author William Manchester over passages in Death of a President (the "official" Kennedy version of the 1963 assassination) offensive to the Johnsons. The passages were eventually removed, but not before the publicity (and the magazine serialization of the book) had given the public a new and unpleasant image of the President.

1967: The folly of being comforted

1967 was another year of protest, of riots, of war. It was the year of a six-day skirmish between the Israelis and the Arabs, the year of giant peacemarches in Washington, Chicago, New York and San Francisco, the year racial violence hit a hundred US cities bringing 60 times the damage the 1966 riots had caused. It was the year draft resistance went organized, the year Dr. Sam Spock spoke out, the year Bill Baird fought for birth control and was arrested. It was the year Carl Stokes became the first black mayor of a major US city, Cleveland, the year Svetlana Stalin came to the west, and the year Lyndon Johnson called for prayer.

Internationally, the biggest news was that Israel was not only not pushed into the sea by her Arab enemies, but instead defeated the combined Arab forces in a war that lasted only six days (June 5 to 10), and seized the Gaza Strip, the Sinai Peninsula, the west bank of the Jordan River, and Golan Heights. Gen. Moshe Dayan was the hero of the war; and not only did the 20-year-old nation take new territory, it kept it, under Dayan's leadership, a recalcitrance the Arabs saw as cause for border incidents that threatened the start of a new flareup.

In South Vietnam, voters installed Nguyen Van Thieu and Nguyen Cao Ky, as expected, but Americans were not happy about the war and the 15,000 American lives that had been lost. In April, massive peacemarches were staged in several US cities, and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. joined with Dr. Benjamin Spock in demanding that the boys come home and the money spent on the war be used instead for domestic programs, especially the relief of poverty. The questions of poverty and civil rights were reemphasized as violence erupted in several cities, including Boston. And while the year's rioting seemed to be caused by insignificant incidents, one significant fact reported by the US Civil Rights Commission was that more blacks were attending segregated schools in 1967 than had been in them in 1954 when the Supreme Court ordered desegregation.

It was the year Virgil Grissom, Edward White and Roger Chaffee were killed in their space capsule on the Cape Kennedy launch pad, the year Che Guevara was killed in Bolivia, the year Cong. Adam Clayton Powell was refused his US House seat, and the year the Harlem voters gave it back. It was the year Pope Paul VI and Patriarch Athenagoras of the Orthodox Church closed the 1000-year-old schism between the eastern and western churches, the year South African Dr. Christian Barnard performed the first successful human heart transplant, and the year the US defense budget reached $70 billion, a new record for a nation seeking peace.

See How They Run

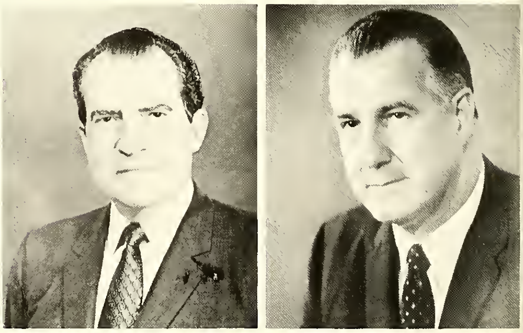
The Age of Innocence—both at home and abroad—seems to have passed for most Americans.
—Eugene McCarthy

1968 was the year everyone but Johnson ran for President, the year Nixon won, Humphrey lost, and McCarthy did a little of both. It was the year Jackie Kennedy married Aristotle Onassis, the year of the Spiro Agnew joke, the year they began peace talks in Paris.

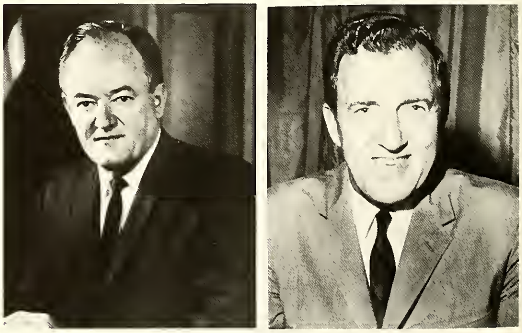
1968 brought the murders of Sen. Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the Pueblo capture, the childrens' starvation in Biafra, and the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia. It was another year of hatred, of war, this time complicated by the Anti-Ballistic Missle furor, and an almost-revived Mid-East conflict, a more adamant China, and a downright arrogant North Korea. But if the evils were just as bad, they at least seemed to be more clearly seen by more people. It was the year the cry of the nation's youth was joined by adults, the year the cry became a shriek.

The year began with the Tet offensive in Vietnam, a battle that seemed to change many Americans' minds in favor of pulling out. It moved through Johnson's resignation speech and a bombing halt, and ended with Richard Nixon as a new President, Eugene McCarthy as a new hero for youth, and former Alabama Gov. George Wallace as an already-announced candidate for the 1972 campaign.

But in between, the nation's youth showed their power, not only in anti-war protests, which became commonplace, but also in pushing the man who was, for many of them, their candidate, Sen. Eugene ("Clean Gene") McCarthy, the man who wanted to fire Hoover and Rusk. McCarthy swept through the New Hampshire primary without benefit of Democratic sanction. And, despite his strenuous opposition to Johnson's foreign policy, he lost by only 49 to 42 per cent, a result looked upon as a victory for a relatively-unknown senator against an incumbent President.



NIXON - AGNEW



HUMPHREY - MUSKIE

It was shortly after the primary, on March 31, that Johnson told a national television audience he would neither seek nor accept the nomination for another term. By the end of April, Vice President Hubert Humphrey, Sen. Robert Kennedy, New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, California Gov. Ronald Reagan, and Wallace had joined McCarthy and Nixon in the race for the Presidency; students at Columbia University had begun a new era in campus protests, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., had been murdered in Memphis, Tenn. (resulting in several riots), and the U.S. and North Vietnam had agreed to meet at Paris to begin peace negotiations.

The social and political turmoil continued. Robert Kennedy ran a strong campaign in predictable Kennedy fashion until, like his brother John, he was murdered. The nation grieved, Edward Kennedy declined a vice presidential spot, Hubert Humphrey moved in, Richard Nixon took the Republican nomination, the Chicago police gained a national reputation for brutality, Humphrey took the Democratic nomination, and McCarthy withdrew. Then the official campaign began.

Nixon ran on an undisclosed "plan" to end the Vietnam war "honorably," and on a more easily-imagined design for "law and order" in the streets. Humphrey was unable to explain away his past loyalty to the now unpopular Johnson; Wallace was unable to explain away his racist past; McCarthy die-hards were unable to bring off a write-in, and the nation elected Richard M. Nixon, the political "has-been" of 1960 to the Presidency with a popular vote about equal to Humphrey's, but by 301 to 191 in the electoral college.

1968 was the year the nation discovered Tiny Tim, the year the sparkling Jacqueline Kennedy married Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis (a union at first traumatic to a nation accustomed to Mrs. Kennedy's widowhood). It was the year the less-sparkling Julie Nixon married the downright boring David Eisenhower, thereby ending for the moment the spate of White House weddings that the Johnson girls had begun.

It was the year adults hopefully told each other that the nation's youth had turned from drugs to gurus and contemplation, and the year drug use rose sharply. It was the year the children were starving in Biafra and no one seemed to care; the year the Russians put a stop to the Czech democratization program; the year the North Koreans seized the US "reconnaissance" ship Pueblo and tweaked America's nose by holding the crew for 11 months while official protests went unheeded.

It was the year Apollo 8 went around the moon, the year astronaut Frank Borman stirred up professional athiest Madalyn Murray O'Hair by reading Genesis from space, the year Hue fell in Vietnam. It was a year of "blind violence" (Johnson), of "hard days ahead" (King), of the "credibility gap," of cries for "peace now," of hijacked airliners, of Resurrection City, and, for many, the year when what McCarthy had described as "this sense of political helplessness" ended with a shout.

GURUS OR DRUGS—a question for youth in 1968

Kids Say the Darndest Things

> The best university that can be recommended to a man of ideas is the gauntlet of the mobs.
> —Emerson

It began at Berkeley and Columbia. It spread in what its opponents called an atmosphere of appeasement and coddling by college administrators. It became more determined and, though it only barely touched Northeastern, it deeply affected all of those for whom the university is more than filled notebooks and final exams. It was, for some, the reality of the "leaders of tomorrow" aphorism the Establishment had been belching for years; and the burgeoning of "student power" both frightened and angered an Establishment that thought it was doing right.

There had always been authority crises, but it was not until 1966 that administrators at Michigan State University handed names of left-wing students to the House Un-American Activities Committee; not until 1967 that faculty and students at Catholic University of America staged a five-day strike, that racial incidents broke out at several colleges, that protests grew larger and larger until the public finally realized that the days of panty raids and school dances were over.

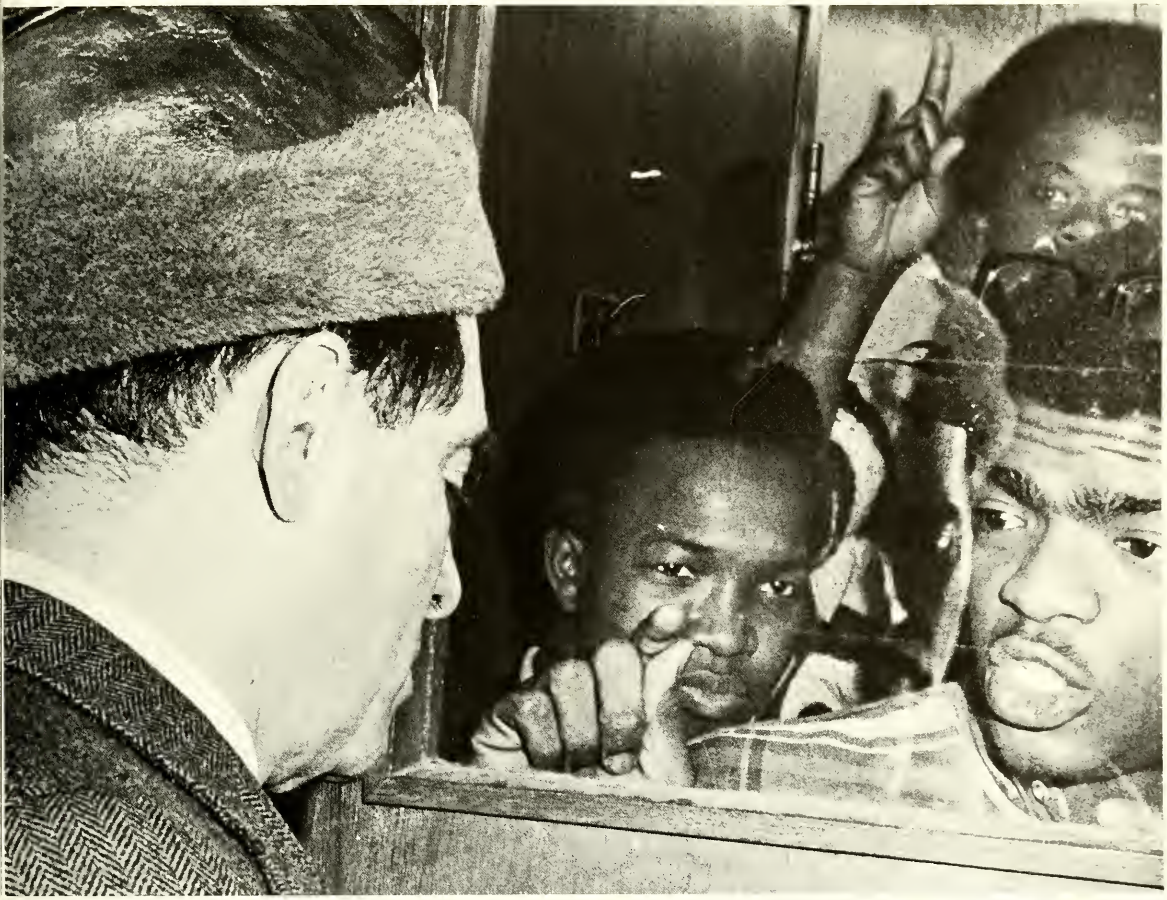
1968 was the big one: the year they closed Columbia down over military research and university construction on ghetto property, the year they forced the university president out, and kicked off a wave of takeovers at colleges across the nation over similar issues. It was the beginning of what protestors hailed as "meaningful student participation" in college administrations, the beginning of the end for "in loco parentis."

Many felt administrators' concessions (co-ed dorms, student advisory committees) didn't show an understanding of the moral problem, the question of why black enrollment was so low, why students had such little say in running their colleges. When some administrators began comparing concessions to "Munich," and used a "get tough" policy, the uncommitted majority began to swing left, and the angry voices grew louder.



Brandeis President Morris Abram at occupied Ford Hall in January, 1969.

BRANDEIS

They cried out at Brandeis in 1969, then at Harvard (where it couldn't happen), then elsewhere. But what made matters worse at Harvard was the entrance of the protestors' arch-enemy, the worst of all possible outsiders to stride onto campus, the cops.

"Pusey's Pigs" echoed through Harvard yard long after the busloads of police and state troopers had cleared protestors from University Hall. It echoed again at Soldiers' Field when students met en masse and voted for a six-day strike to express their anger at Pusey's decision. And it echoed in facuty lounges among respectable men for whom the university was, and should have remained, a place of free speech, an island for the intellect, a place inviolate to outsiders.

1969: Anthem for Doomed Youth

The last school year at Northeastern brought with it the knowledge that the sanctuary of the University was over, that even those who had ignored the world for five years must now go into it, must pay attention to the economy and taxes, must be concerned with poverty, civil rights, and the direction society might take, must even be reduced to the lesser concerns of social existence. It was the year the New Generation realized that its often-stated design to change society would be tempted by the Business as Usual philosophy its parents preached.

1969 was the year man landed on the moon, the year Ted Kennedy drove off the Chappaquiddick bridge, the year Sirhan Sirhan was sentenced to the gas chamber for killing Robert Kennedy and James Earl Ray got 99 years for Dr. Martin Luther King's murder. It was the year of the Abe Fortas affair, of the Earl Douglas controversy, of the Clement Haynesworth nomination (and rejection) for the Supreme Court. It was the year the Johnson men condemned Nixon's use of "patriotism" to force support for his war policies, even though that tactic could be trailed to the LBJ ranch.

It was the year that Spiro Agnew struck out at television, that famed anthropologist Margaret Mead told Congress pot should be legalized, that the SDS split and its factions turned to namecalling as the FBI kept investigating. It was the year airplane hijacking became a national sport, the year Nixon began pulling troops out of Vietnam and set up the draft lottery, the year Ho Chi Minh died.

It was a time of music and joy at Woodstock, N.Y., where a half million "hippies" gathered and newspapers couldn't find even a fistfight to report; a time of national moratorium when elder joined younger in the name of peace. It was the year Howard Hughes was buying up Las Vegas real estate, and the Aquarians noted he would have beachfront property when California slipped into the sea; the year campus takeovers came to Brandeis, Harvard, MIT and even Northeastern, the year black studies came to many campuses, the year racial violence declined instead of rising.

The generation that thought it right to only stand and wait had been replaced by an activist generation that demanded reform of social evils. But that latter generation waited, too: waited for the end of war, for the end of racism, for the end of the violence that pervaded our whole lives. Like Prufrock, we "wept and fasted, wept and prayed," but it was no longer a question of "Do I dare?" It was, rather, whether human voices would wake us only to drown.

"All kinds of scrambled thoughts, all of them confused, some of them irrational, many of them which I cannot recall, and some of which I would not have seriously entertained under normal circumstances went through my mind during this period. They were reflected in the various inexplicable, inconsistent, and inconclusive things I said and did, including such questions as whether the girl might still be alive somewhere out of that immediate area, whether some awful curse did actually hang over all the Kennedys . . ." —Edward M. the sound of silence

hello darkness my old friend
i've come to talk with you again, because a vision softly creeping, left its seeds while i was sleeping and the vision that was planted in my brain still remains within the sounds of silence.

in restless dreams i walked alone, narrow streets of cobblestone
'neath the halo of a street lamp
i turned my collar to the cold and damp when my eyes were stabbed by the flash of a neon light that split the night, and touched the sound of silence.

and in the naked light i saw ten thousand people maybe more, people talking without speaking,
people hearing without listening, people writing songs that voices never share and no one dares disturb the sound of silence.

"fools" said i, "you do not know silence like a cancer grows.
hear my words that i might teach you, take my arms that i might reach you."
but my words like silent raindrops fell and echoed in the wells of silence.

and the people bowed and prayed to the neon God they made,
and the sign flashed out its warning in the words that it was forming.
and the sign said:
"the words of the prophets are written on the subway walls and tenement halls" and whispered in the sounds of silence.

Violence spoken here

These are the glory boys, the guts and glory boys who give up society, studies, and life for the glumness of dark Fall afternoons when they hit each other. These men are protected by pads. People drool on Saturday afternoons when they gather in the glory. Middle-aged men wince with the crunching sound and crispness of youth. Old men are amazed, wondering what ever happened to their legs. Why did the muscles tighten? I can still remember racing 60 yards with an amazing interception against Colby one rainy September in 1933, they say. During the week, Northeastern football men, circa 1970, will duplicate what has happened for years. They will run without noticing shin splints developing. Breathing will not be so easy with a vertigo stomach. Some, like captain Ken Orcutt, will feel the pain during the game. For them, it is natural.

Hail to thee, blythe spirit . . .

The coach is like a master sergeant,
drilling, pushing,
driving his men—

But he is, too,
like a father,
like a general,
a leader who finds a new way to fight the battle
when the odds seem too great—

a motivating force that keeps the team together,
that keeps spirits up.

Morale is a major part of winning.

Hockey

What could be on a hockey player's mind? Not helmets, because they are uncomfortable, sweaty, and inhibit the clash of bodies smashing at many miles per hour. How can a person love something without trying to destroy it? For them, a broken tooth is only a notch for the stick, it just means they tried harder, and that's worth everything. Something's happening here, you say when watching the mortal combat on ice, but what it is ain't exactly clear. There's a man with a stick over there, telling me I got to beware. Stop! What's that sound, only goals ringing round. Scars and sticks and reams of pain, the aching, paining way you feel. That's for what it's worth.

Joe Sarno is one of those little wingers in Northeastern hockey history that nobody ever heard of. He's also a scrapper who brought NU a few moments of glory in the continuing dismal seasons against faster, bigger, stronger, and better opponents. Even wearing glasses, he was always the fist in the crease looking for a centering pass, or along the boards, centering the pass. Little Joe was average, but his desire stood above his ability, making him a man for NU's winter.

Overall, Northeastern had a good season as far as winter sports went. After a tender three wins and six losses for the football team, sports fans were looking for one winter sport to shine. Unfortunately, it never really happened.

The hockey team under the direction of Coach Jim Bell had the cards stacked against it almost from the start of the season. Only eight lettermen were returning from the 1968-69 squad which had posted a 7 and 16 record. In addition, the number two and three scorers from the previous season were scholastically ineligible.

Captain Dave Poile, center, compiled 37 goals and eight assists for 45 points, while his wings, Crawford Bell and Terry Cain, posted 29 and 22 points respectively. Help also was received from seniors Dean Andersen, Jim Hampe, Tom Daniels, Kevin Delaney and John Joyce.

And all to a lost cause. Three wins and 20 losses.

Both games at the Boston Arena Christmas Tourney were lost to BU and Michigan State, but at the Beanpot was a little sweeter, having taken AIC 5 to 4 in overtime. Unfortunately, Harvard defeated the Northeastern stickmen by the same score at the Beanpot—also in overtime.

The men in the net looked good, all things considered. Northeastern simply was outshot; opponent's shots on goal 1,045, to NU's 690. Dan Eberly was able to turn back 759 out of 869, while his partner in the nets, John Burke, who took less of a barrage, returned 131 of 159.

It felt good to take Army 7 to 4.

If Northeastern had a spectator sport at all this year, it was basketball. Coach Dick Dukeshire's men managed to capture a 14 and 8 overall season record.

The loss of two big men in the 68-69 season didn't hamper Dukeshire and his hoop men who were able to dump such Big Name Schools as Brown, Bates, Tufts, and BU as well as Brandeis and MIT in the Colonial Tourney.

The 78-76 loss to Holy Cross was a heartbreaker. In all, Northeastern deserved its winning season, outscoring opponents 79 to 75 and outrebounding them 47 to 39 per game. That's what it takes to win a basketball game; control of the ball and putting the ball through the hoop.

Jack Maheras and Jim Moxley along with Bill Moore managed to account for about 42.4 points per game. (The statistics do not reflect the outcome of the Colonial Tournament.)

Backing up the three M's were underclassmen and returning players Kevin Shea, Fran Blais, Jack Niven and Paul Swett. Help also came from seniors Jeff Gallahue and Stan Fiumara.

Next year should look promising for Dukeshire with so many returning, experienced players.

Indoor Track was another winning sport. Out of 10 dual meets, Northeastern came away with 8 wins, losing only to St. John's and Harvard. In addition, Northeastern placed third at the Greater Boston Championships at Harvard coming in behind the perennial foes Harvard and BC. At the New Englands meet at the University of Connecticut, NU placed second to U. Conn., losing its New Englands title won in 1969.

It usually begins early Saturday morning. It's cold, and frost is perched on the ground, where trees stand shivering in a naked row. You're 11, with sneakers hidden by a wrapped white towel. Bounding into the gymnasium, you're completely oblivious of the hidden terrors a colder world has outside. The only world you know has hardwood, steel rims, and a white net. What else could there be to live for? Two hours of running, jumping, faking, twisting, and turning with other half-naked bodies in a sweatbox gym has just convinced you that without basketball life would be as the cold as the weather.

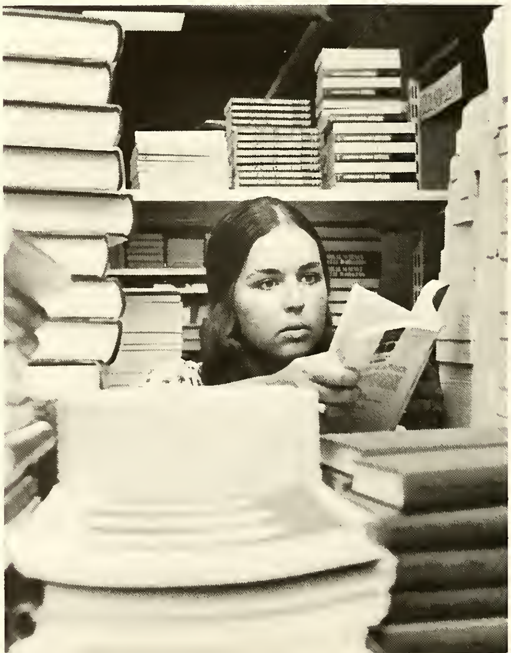
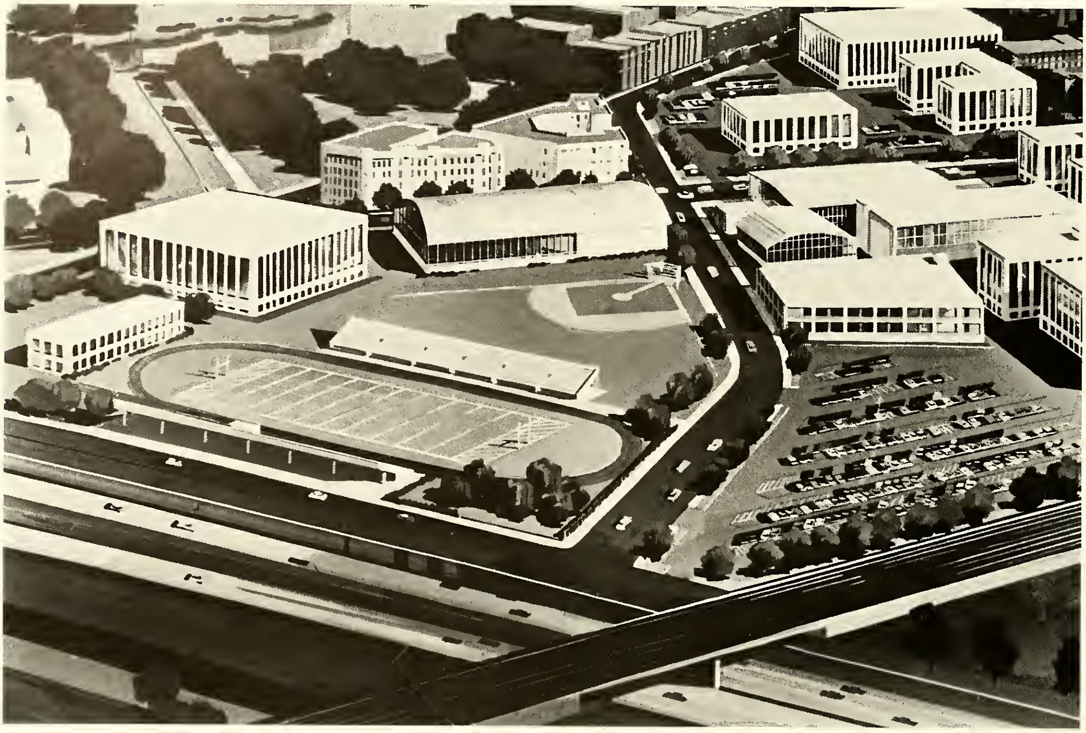
This sporting life is killing me. Why do we not hear the glamorous roar of crowds urging men to kill themselves for the pleasure of non-participants? The athlete is a separate creature, turning away from frenetic rushes into crowds. He wants a lonely world, seeking only the satisfaction of a great performance. Inside, beneath the strained heart and limbs, he knows there is a great moment waiting. And though there be thousands of people to see it, only he will understand how it was built.



Small Beginnings Hatched A Giant University



As each student flipped over the colorful postcard which acknowledged the university's receipt of his admissions application five years ago, he viewed what was to be the end result of Northeastern's Diamond Anniversary Development Program as of 1973.

Along with the admissions message on the back of the postcard, the student was told that the world's largest co-operative plan university would double its academic facilities and nearly triple the size of its faculty under this $40 million program.

Even then, in 1965, the artist's conception of Northeastern's expansion essentially was dead on the drawing boards.

The campus pictured above would never be realized in time, because of the indecision of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority as to the location of the long-delayed and hotly-debated inner belt.

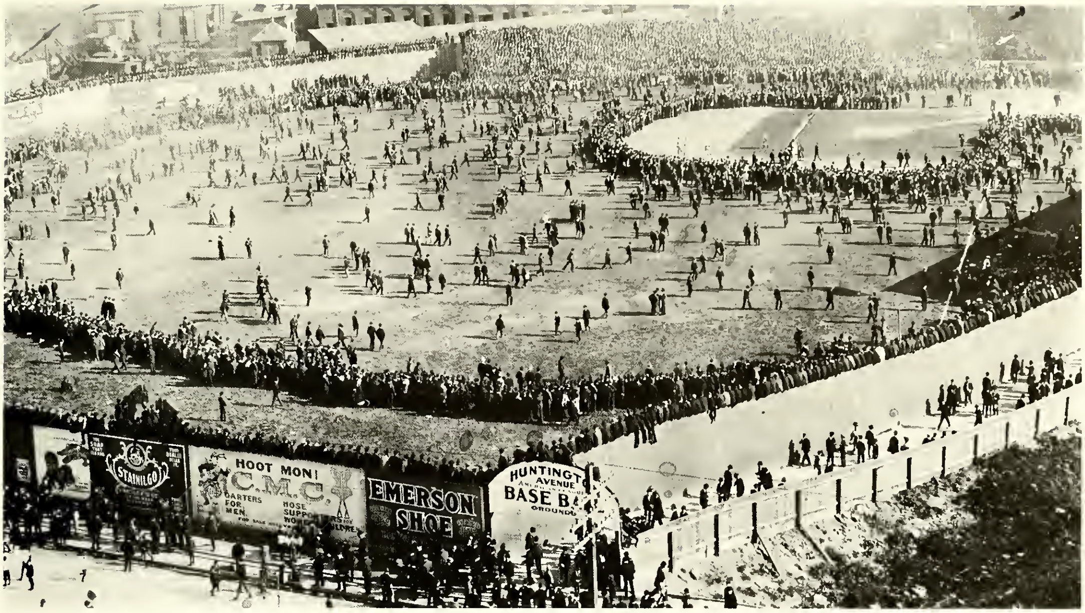
Yet, the university, in the past five years has gone ahead with as much of the program as possible.

In a quest for academic excellence, Northeastern, through its Diamond Anniversary Program, has expanded its physical facilities to provide the framework, grey-glazed brick and mortar as it may be, necessary to bring such universal educational ideals to their full potential.

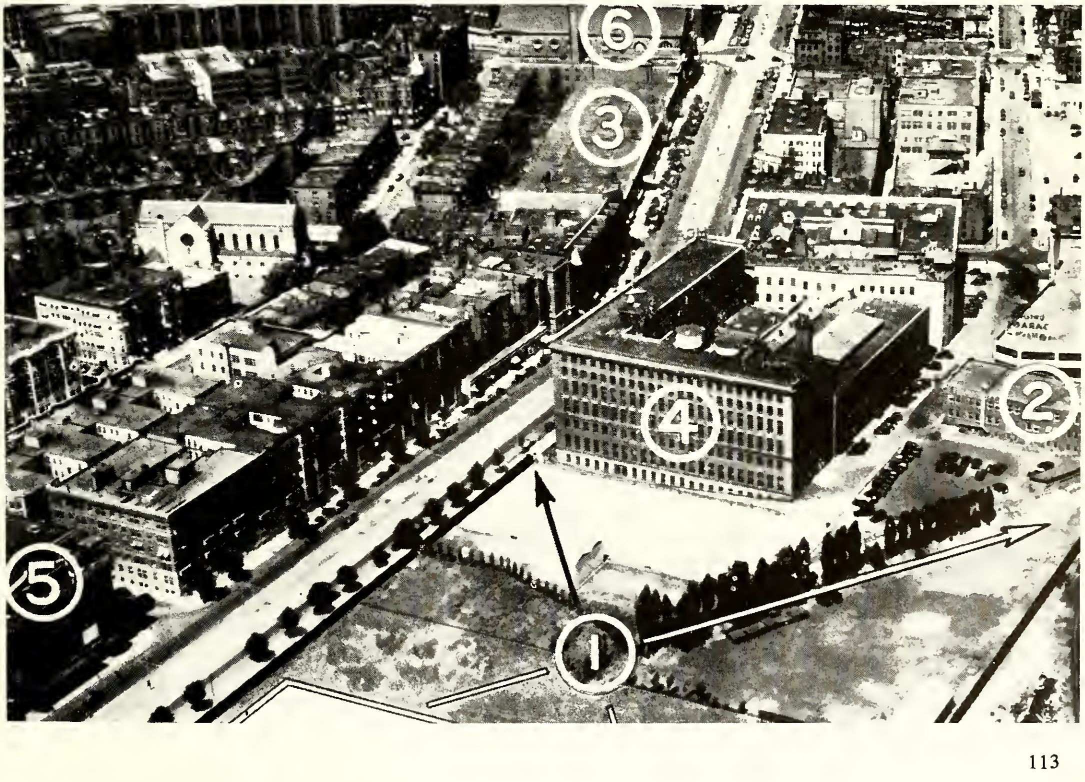
The seeds of this development program first were planted in 1961 when the university announced its plan for the building schedule to coincide with the 75th anniversary of its founding —1973.

The year was 1898 when the law school first opened its doors as part of the YMCA's Evening Institute classroom program. This was Northeastern's official beginning, yet at the time, no one knew or dreamed such humble beginnings would blossom into a university—the largest private university in the nation.

The course itself was offered four nights a week, one hour a night, for a total of 200 credits, and was taught by a law faculty of five—three professors from Harvard, and two from Boston University, the only two law schools in the area at the time. Tuition was $30, including a $5 membership fee in the YMCA. On Oct. 3, 1898, Northeastern's history began as one of the only three area schools preparing students for the state bar.



ON A PLOT OF GROUND which now defines Northeastern University was once a baseball field. The first World Series (above) gets under way in 1903 on the university site. The infield, (upper right) probably is now the parking lot. In that first series, the Boston Americans won the world title by defeating the Pittsburg Pirates Nationals. Below, an aerial photo a couple of decades later shows plans for the new University. (1.) Other areas shown are the university's laboratory building (2), the educational building of the Boston YMCA occupied by the university (4), and the assessor's plan for the university's first building, Richard's Hall (7).



In 1902, the law school graduated its first class, a total of 21 students. In 1904, the program was incorporated into the school of law with the power of granting the LL.B. degree in law. Since that time, Northeastern University has developed rapidly.

Co-operative education was initiated into the Boston area in 1909—three years after the University of Cincinnati set the precedent of co-op learning in an academic setting. At that time, the YMCA's Evening Institute offered a four-year program in engineering that consisted of alternating single weeks of classroom study with practical job experience.

In 1916, Northeastern College was established, with the power of granting bachelor's degrees in engineering coming in 1920. Two years later, the college was renamed Northeastern University. That same year, the College of Business Administration was established with the power to grant A.B. and B.S. degrees.

In 1929, the University made its first purchase of land on Huntington Avenue, and the following year also purchased Huntington Field in Brookline, which recently was renamed the Edward Snow Parson's field in honor of the University's first athletic director.

By 1937, the College of Liberal Arts was established with degree granting power. The Northeastern University Corporation was begun and the Academy was organized.

It wasn't until 1938, however, that its first building, Richard's Hall, right, was completed on Huntington Avenue.

Below, an aerial photo shows completed Richard's Hall (1.), the YMCA, which still was being used (2.) the laboratory (3), the oval track (4) and parking lots (5).

Left, an artist conception shows the new university library as envisioned in 1945. The final location of the library was made quite late, and it eventually went up next to the YMCA building, facing Richard's Hall.

Northeastern now has more than 30 completed buildings on its sprawling 47-acre campus.

Before the building program was announced, university buildings included Richards Hall, Science Hall, Carl Stephens Ell Student Center (above), Robert Gray Dodge Library, Godfrey Lowell Cabot Physical Education Center, Hayden Hall and Churchill Graduate Center.

At right, Mugar Life Sciences Building, first to be completed under the construction program, receives its name in concrete.

As the Mugar Life Sciences Building was being completed, work was begun on the addition to the Ell Student Center and the new Frank Palmer Speare Hall dormitory for women. Remodeling of the Henderson House (center for continuing education in Weston), and the establishment of a suburban campus on a former Nike site in Burlington also got underway.

During the program's second phase, gifts were received for the improvement of Ashland's Warren Center for physical education and recreation, as well as the suburban campuses and the colleges of Nursing and Pharmacy were received.

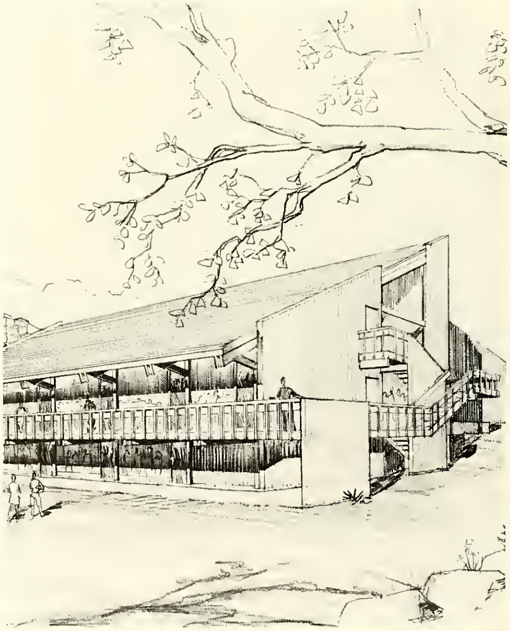
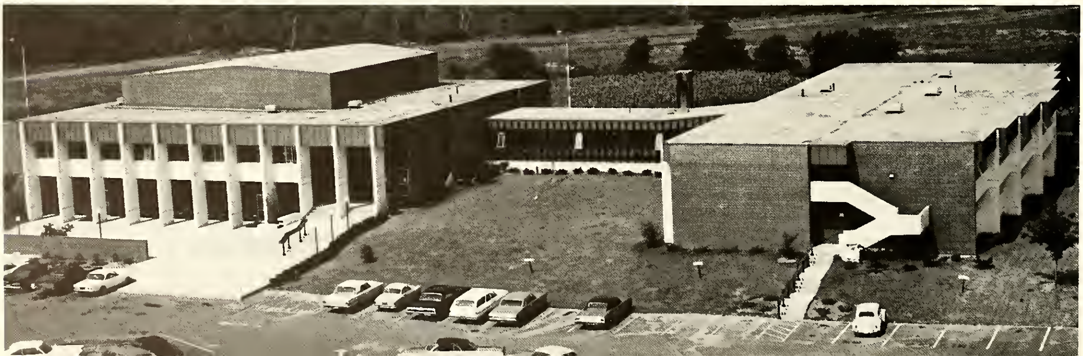
An aerial view of the Warren Center for physical education and recreation, top, including Hayden Lodge, right, is located about 30 miles from Boston's campus in Ashland. The center serves as a year-round outdoor laboratory for students in the Boston Bouve College. The 150-acre wooded estate is bordered on one side by a large lake. There are facilities for conferences, special education in arts and crafts as well as sports. The site was dedicated officially in May, 1967.

The Burlington Campus, below, established in 1964 on a 15-acre tract, which formerly was a Nike site, consists of a modern classroom-office building as well as a library and bookstore.

The complex supports about 300 commuter freshmen each year. Programs also are offered to adults and graduate students. In Burlington, students don't seem to complain about parking problems.





In 1965, which for the Class of 1970 was freshman year, construction began on the Mary Gass Robinson Hall, Top, Speare Hall and the physical-electrical engineering research building. In November of that year, the Ell Student Center, complete with "modern" cafeteria, officially was dedicated.

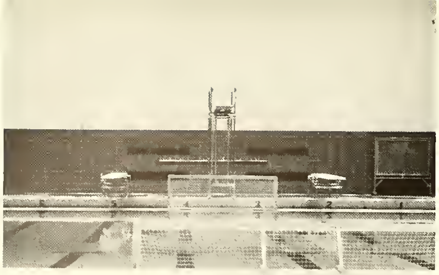
A year later, the Robinson Hall or the so-called "nursing building" was completed, just two years after Northeastern launched its unique co-operative College of Nursing.

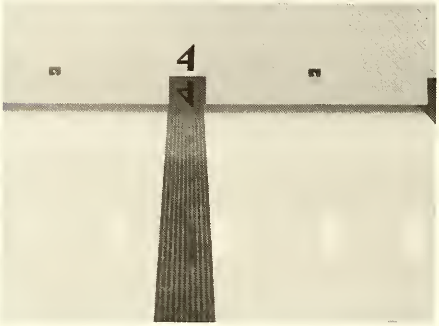
Five other buildings named that year were Stetson Hall, Churchill Hall, Light Hall, Smith Hall, White Hall and Melvin Hall.

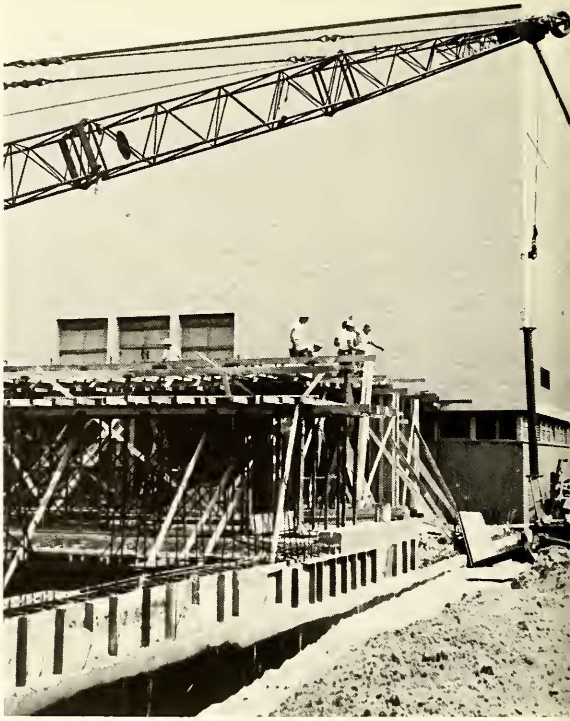
Also in 1966, the university acquired 20 acres at East Point, Nahant which would become the beginning of a Marine Science Research Institute.

In 1967, heavy machinery moved onto Forsyth Street, marking the beginning of Bouve College. And, commuters lost another parking lot, above.

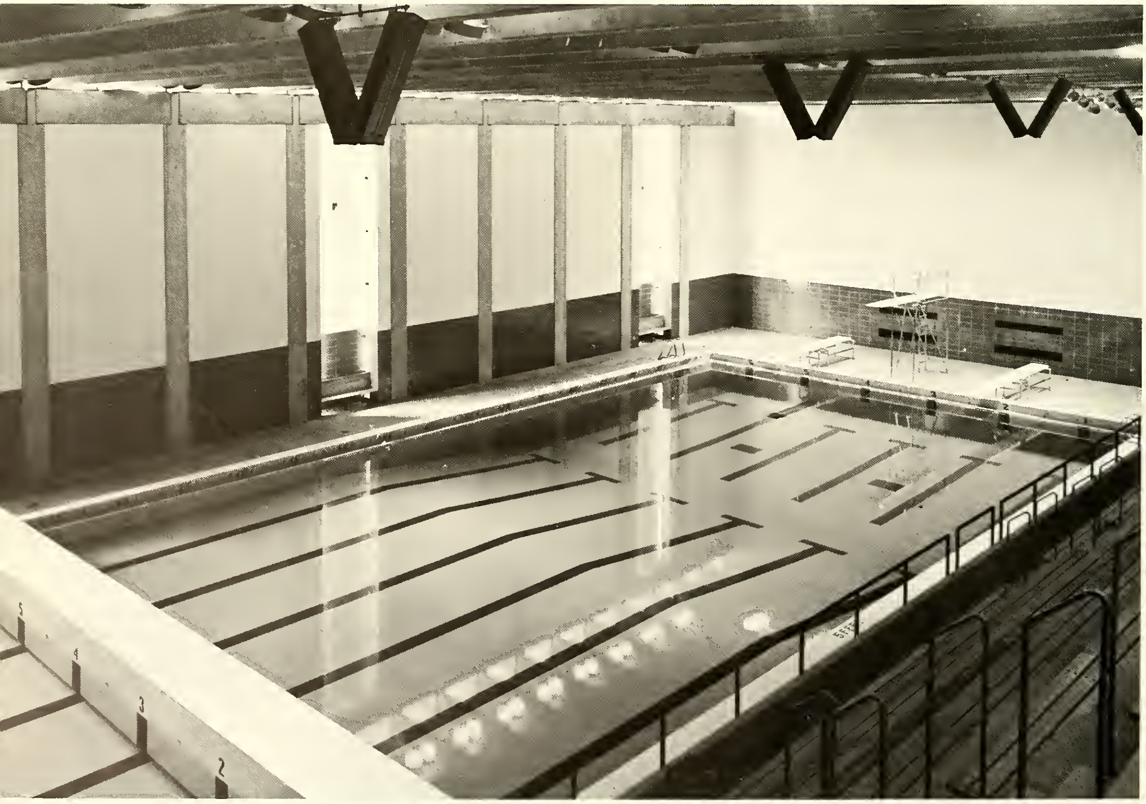
Also begun that year was the swimming pool and chemistry building.







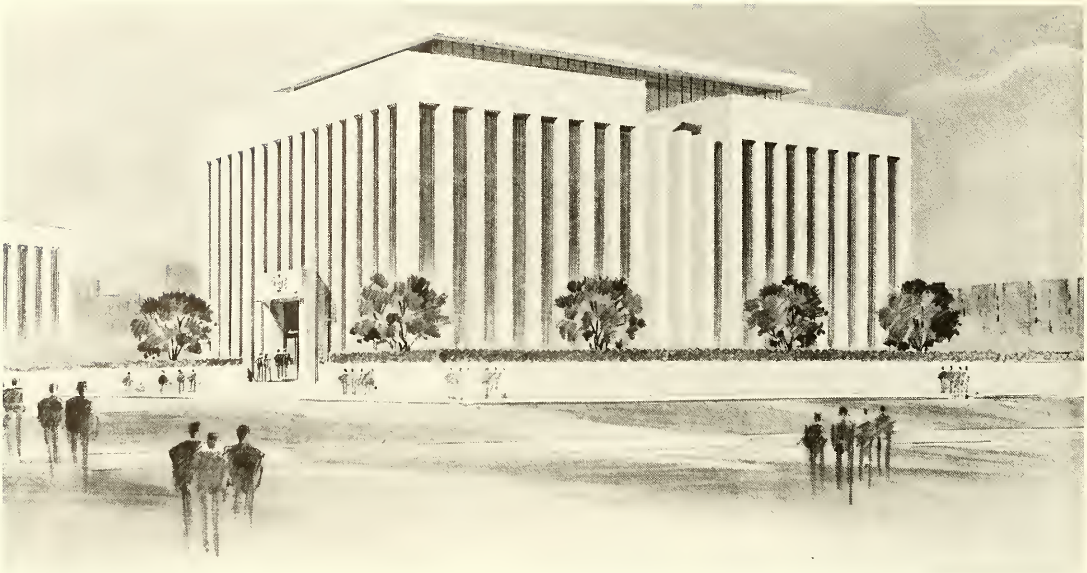
Barletta Natorium, known to most as the "NU swimming pool," under construction.



The Edwards Marine Science Laboratory, top, located at East Point, Nahant, is used during the summer for the teaching of four graduate courses in Marine biology. A dormitory housing 20 graduate students and four small cottages for visiting investigators is planned. All colleges in the area use facilities for field work in ecology and marine ecology.

Below, Edward "Putty" Parsons views a placque which dedicates the athletic field in Brookline to him.

Bottom, a view of Stetson Hall.



Progress on the development program continued in 1968 as we entered that year of limbo as middlers. Ground was broken for the $2.3 million building which now housed the school of law and provides headquarters for the College of Criminal Justice. It is named the Asa S. Knowles Building, in honor of the current president of the university.

The school of law which began the university's history in 1898 was reopened officially in September, 1968 as a four-year college on the co-op plan —the nation's first co-op law school.

In October, 1968, the Charles and Estelle Dockser Hall, which houses Bouve facilities, was dedicated.

Early in the senior year, the Barletta Natatorium, or the swimming pool, was completed.

On the next page is the proposed 16-story, $6.3 million library scheduled for completion in 1973.

The bottom picture shows the amount of parking spaces which will be taken for the project.

The Diamond Anniversary Development plan has expanded the campus tremendously during the past five years, and although the architect's plans of 10 years ago will not thoroughly materialize, much has been accomplished.

Hanoi's Little Helpers

It's now official. The peace [illegible] are demonstrating today urging the United States to "bug out" and [illegible] Vietnam [illegible] the early and complete [illegible] of the [illegible] government of North Vietnam.

If they could, [illegible] Hanoi would probably send a medal to every [illegible] and [illegible] participant of the "peace" marchers today.

We would, however, warn the "peace" marchers that their subservience to Hanoi will get them no favors if the Communists were to take over this country. The first people the Communists have eliminated in nations such as Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary and other nations they have seized have been the "peace" marchers. The Communists figure if they were foolish enough to march FOR them they are completely unreliable. So these people are immediately removed from the scene by various handy methods of execution.

So none of you peace marchers should have any delusions that you are going to play a prominent part in the Communist regime which many of you apparently want to see take over in the United States.

Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson [illegible] made some [illegible] remarks about the complete STUPIDITY of many U.S. intellectuals when it comes to dealing with the prac-

Bridge Condition Reported Critical

By J. LEO DEBY

A final report on the examination of the Nazaire L. Biron Kelley Falls Bridge discloses that it is in a far more serious condition than originally believed, Superintendent Robert J. Caron said today.

At the same time Caron stated that the Highway Commission voted the following emergency measures at a meeting Tuesday afternoon:

1. The bridge will be restricted to passenger car traffic only. No truck or buses will be allowed to use the bridge in the interest of safety to the public. The life of the bridge can be prolonged by the elimination of truck traffic which causes an undue amount of vibration.

2. The travel lanes will be narrowed one foot further on each side by marking the pavement.

3. The speed limit remains at 25 miles per hour. Motorists are urged to comply with this regulation.

4. The sidewalk area is in particularly bad condition. Repairs estimated at approxi

Student Throng Arrives Here For Parade

Motorcades of college students were pouring into Manchester early this afternoon as the hour of the antiwar Vietnam Moratorium observance here neared.

Students from nearly all colleges in the Queen City and from many other institutions — including the University of New Hampshire, Dartmouth and New England College — were expected to participate.

In Keene, a group of men raised funds for a large anti-Moratorium ad in the local newspaper there. Alexis Caron of 271 Roxbury St. served as chairman.

"I'm not a joiner and I usually get involved in things like this," he said. Nevertheless, he and nearly 100 other Elm City men felt so strongly about the Moratorium issue that they came forward without hesitation.

Contributions for the ad were made in the spirit of [illegible]

Says Marchers 'Carry Flag of Hanoi'

Reagan Charges 'Peace' Groups

WASHINGTON — UPI — Gov. Ronald Reagan has accused some of the participants in today's antiwar demonstrations of carrying the flag of Hanoi in the streets of America.

With President Nixon sitting silently nearby, the California governor took the occasion of a tribute banquet for Pres. Dwight D. Eisenhower to launch a sharp attack on the Vietnam moratorium.

"Parades are held in the name of peace, but some of those who march carry the flag of a nation that has killed almost 40,000 of our young men," Reagan said. "We have a right to suspect that at least some of those who arranged the parades are lending comfort and aid to the enemy."

Reagan was the only one of eight speakers at a banquet honoring what would have been the late chief executive's 79th birthday anniversary to attack antiwar demonstrations.

He accused supporters of the demonstrations of "kibitzing in a game where they haven't even seen the cards." He also said Hanoi was weaving its strat

Black students turned out enmasse for the purpose of stopping the noted scientist from delivering a paper on the genetic differences between blacks and whites.

Efforts by faculty members to establish a dialogue between the students and Dr.

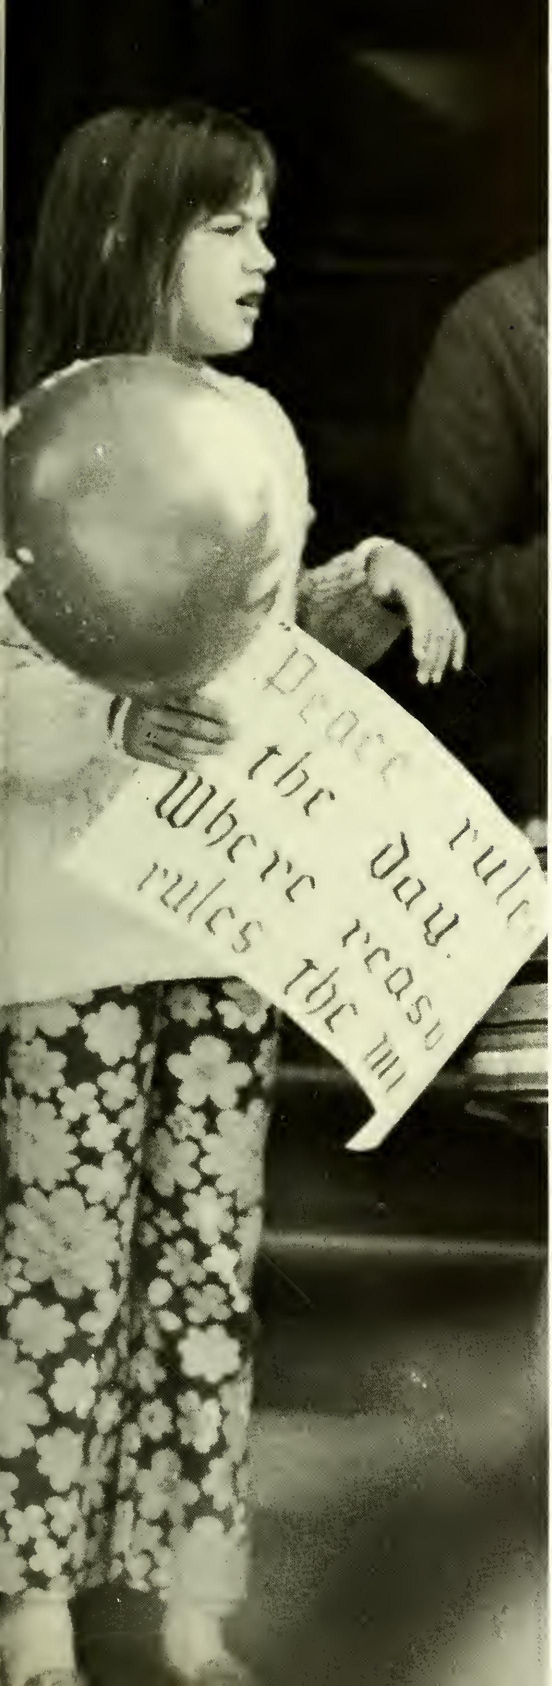
Symbol of a Subculture

The New Morality



"That is no country for old men."
—Yeats

Like the 1950s, the 60s had their character, their attitudes, their issues. At the beginning of the decade, commentators predicted the "sexy sixties" and the "decade of optimism" ahead. They were right about the first part, at least in comparison with the fifties; but the second was made when Kennedy's "new generation" held the White House, before the Old Men with their old beliefs took over again.

In the fifties, the symbols of youth—the leather jackets, the long slick hair, the Elvis Presley love songs—were simply little side trips into the unorthodox to show that the teenager was not yet ready to join the Establishment. The older generation's complaint was only that rock 'n' roll was stupid, not that authority had lost its grip on the young. But the things the youth of the fifties saw as unorthodox—drinking, sex, motorcycles, violent dances—had the stink of commonness to the children of the sixties.

They came with protest songs and miniskirts, placards and peace symbols and paisley pants, demanding the right to toplessness, to long hair, pot, peace and love. They came with a moral voice that made the fifties seem naively thoughtless, and with an affinity for the unorthodox that made the former decade seem amateurish by comparison. There were lightshows and lapel buttons, draft resistance and drugs; there were flowers for cops, who had clubs for kids; there were gurus and an existential sense of self-in-others, and singers like Dylan and the Beatles for a sense of others-in-self. But above all, there was a new sense of freedom among the young, a sense of self-expression, a "do your own thing" sense of identity, a pacifist philosophy that abhorred violence, an indignation that was itself sometimes violent.

And the change was so fast, that the gap was not merely between generations, but between persons only a few years apart in age, only a few miles apart in distance, only a few political science courses away in education. Professors in middle age agreed with students in their mid-teens, while parents in their thirties could not talk to children who had an adult sense of anguish at the injustices of a society they would inherit and change, perhaps for the better.

The political and social apathy of the adults was more than matched by the activism of the young; the blind patriotism of those for whom the Domino Theory meant "win in Vietnam" was matched by the realities of their own dead sons.

Age thirty was the cutoff age between rebel and respectable citizen, at least in the opinion of those who hoped the New Morality was just another version of goldfish swallowing. But the heroes—Robert Kennedy, Eugene McCarthy, Kenneth Galbraith, Benjamin Spock, Timothy Leary, Edward Kennedy—were past the thirty barrier. And even those who predicted after each protest that the placard carriers would soon join the Business as Usual generation were sometimes uneasy that, somehow, the Establishment would never be the same again.

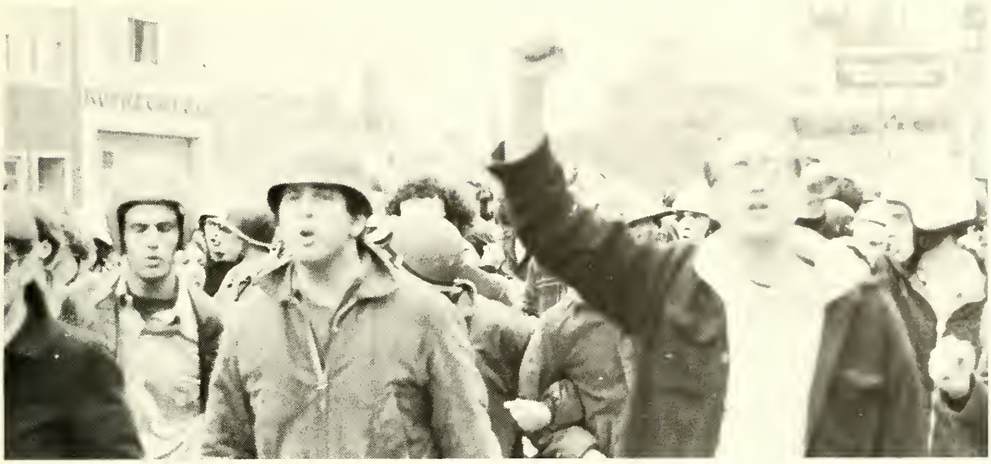
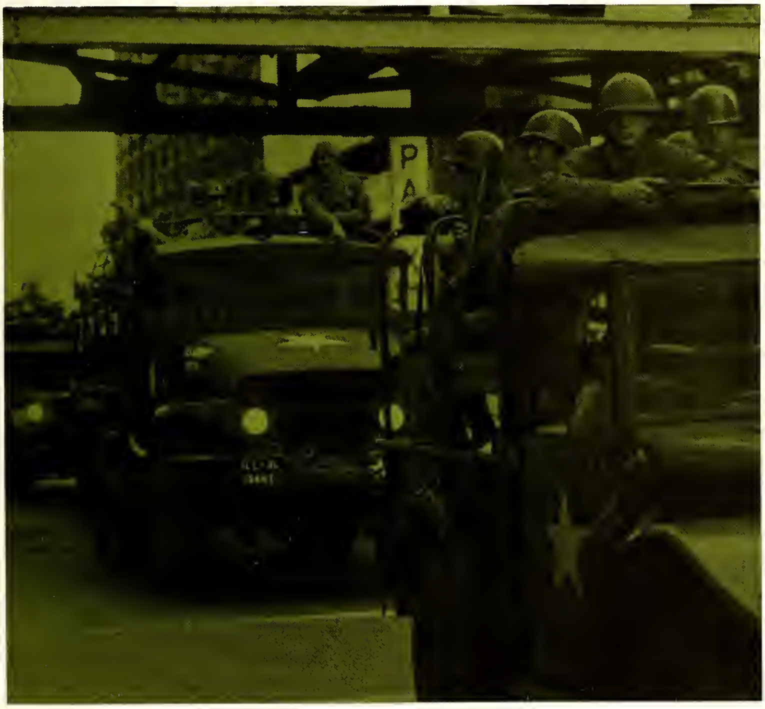
CONFRONTATION





From October 8 to 11, 1969, the Weathermen faction of the Students for a Democratic Society invaded Chicago for the first major New Left confrontation with "Mayor Daley's police" since the 1968 Democratic Convention.

They did some smashing, some terrorizing, some rioting. They were not supported by other SDS factions, but went forth looking for a place to smash out the frustration of their impotence to end Vietnam, to end American imperialism, to help the black man, to destroy the evils of American capitalism.

They ran and smashed and yelled slogans; the National Guard joined the police, and the Weathermen "Red Army" was beaten.

NU NEWS Editor-in-Chief Robert Matorin was there. These are some of his photos.

Dick Gregory: Notes on a troubled land.

Dick Gregory, comedian and philosopher, civil rights activist and a self-styled "old fool" ready to tell youth the secrets his generation used to fail so miserably, has much to say to today's troubled generation. Though his humor and idiom are somewhat lost in print, we think these excerpts from his "The Light Side, The Dark Side" album are worth reading. The album itself is unquestionably worth hearing in its entirety.

The editors

. . . you young folks in America today is probably the most morally dedicated, committed group of young people that's ever lived in this country, bar none. I hope you don't have to depend on these old right-wing cracker-controlled newspapers . . . to find out who you are, 'cause you'll never learn. What these newspapers say about you, they say that you are hippie, yippie, irresponsible, bearded, smelly kids, whatever that means. And the question that comes to mind is, because you have a beard why does that mean you have to stink? They don't say nothin' about Abraham Lincoln. And he didn't only have a beard, he was ugly, too.

You see, the average established newspaper in America is really too immoral to even discuss you young people with yourself. They've never been honest with you. The newspapers in this country are so busy puttin' you down they've never once reported that had it not been for you, LBJ would probably still be the President today. You young kids created an atmosphere where LBJ had to retire. Do you know how strong that is? LBJ is probably the number one tyrant to walk the face of the earth since Julius Caesar, and you young kids sent him back to the ranch, and you didn't fire one missile, one firebomb, or shoot one shot. You just got out with a pure moral dedication, and he understood how powerful that was . . .

. . . you know, it gets pretty embarrassing to me as I have to go all over the country and speak with young people and not only tell you that the fate and destiny of America depends on you, not only do I have to say that you have to solve the problems confrontin' America tonight, you have to solve problems that you had nothin' to do with creating. These problems confrontin' America today . . . were here before you got here, but thanks to us old fools, they will not be here when you leave. . . . we have created a situation for you youngsters that you have no choice but to solve the problems.

We had a generation of us fools that crossed right ahead of you (and) . . . not only did we not solve the problems confrontin' America, but for the first time in the history of America, we used up all the tricks. . . .

. . . I remember when I was a kid, my mother, my father, the whole community taught me: "one day, you're going to grow up, boy, and white man goin' to call you nigger, and don't get mad, 'cause God don't like no ugly." And sure enough, I grew up, and a cracker called me a nigger, and I didn't get mad, 'cause God don't like no ugly. You know, I got seven little black kids at home right now, and me and my ol' lady ain't teachin' 'em nothin' . . . .

On the National Credibility Gap

. . . the Establishment keeps lying to you twenty-four hours a day. And then after you catch us, we say, "well, there's a generation gap." There's a moral gap. I stand here tonight and I say, "two and two is seven," and when you react to it, O say, "ah, well, it's just the generation gap." Ain't got nothin' to do with age. Bertrand Russell is 98 years old and can leave London, England and come to America and be one of the youngest among us because he's going to reach you from a high, ethical, moral standpoint. . . .

. . . And what's the number one lie we tell you young kids today? We say, "the number one problem confrontin' America today is the problem of air pollution." That's what we tell you. The number one problem confrontin' America today is the problem of moral pollution. This is the most morally-polluted, degenerate, insane nation on the face of this earth, bar none. And you youngsters have the job of giving America her sanity back, you have the job of makin' America the morally stable country that the founding fathers meant for her to be. And I hope you don't make the same mistake that all these right-wing crackers make. They're so busy eulogizin' the country—"America the beautiful"—eulogies are for dead things. And thanks to you youngsters, America is not dead yet. . . . I hope you will go out and examine this country and find out where the cancer is and cut it out. . . .

. . . the sad thing about this country, and I think the most embarrassing thing is we are the only country on the face of this earth that lies about what we're all about. Mao Tse Tung don't pretend to be anything but a Communist and a revolutionist. Them fools over there in Moscow, Russia, they don't pretend to be anything else other than some Communists. As dirty and as sick as Hitler was, he didn't pretend to the world, he let the whole world know he felt them Nazis were superior to everybody else on the face of this earth. Them folks in South Africa, they don't lie. They let the whole world know they don't like them niggers. America's the only country that lies about what she is. And that should embarrass you. Because no matter how dirty the rest of the world is, they will own up to what they are. We say we're about one thing, but we do altogether something else in this country. . . .

. . . I was tickled to death over what happened at the Democratic Convention. 'Cause three days after the Democratic Convention was over, a lot of you kids woke up. Three days after the Democratic Convention was over, the whole Establishment tried to convince you that you did not see what you saw on television. They said it didn't happen. They said the press created it. You know, if Kosygin and the rest of them damn fool Russians in Moscow was dealin' with the world as insane as America, you know, they could beat that Czechoslovakian rap. Just get on worldwide television and say, "It didn't happen, y'all. Yeah, you didn't see it." . . .

. . . I hope that you will create a situation in America where America will become as ashamed of injustices at home as she is afraid of Communism abroad. . . .

But them fools in Moscow, Russia made the same mistake these old fools made in America. . . . they knew how the old folks was goin' to react, but they never took into consideration the reaction of you young kids. When them Russians moved those tanks into Czechoslovakia, they knew them old folks was goin' to be scared, but they, they never knew they'd see the day that young kids would run to their tanks and put swastikas on the tanks. I guess it'd be the same thing in America, if they plotted on bringin' tanks into America—wake up Sunday mornin' and every church's got a tank sittin' in front of it, and a loudspeaker says, "anybody tries to go to church is goin' to get machinegunned to death." They'd know damn good and well them old folks ain't about to go to church. But what they wouldn't consider: that in America, young people that ain't never been to church in their life would decide to go Sunday mornin'.

That's why you keep the system upset. 15,000 hippies and yippies came to Chicago to change a system and the whole Establishment got up tight. . . . it had nothin' to do with what you kids was doin' there, didn't have nothin' to do about tearin' up the town. . . . And to prove that, for the last ten years every spring break, you white kids been goin' to Fort Lauderdale, Florida, tearin' the whole town up, and nobody gives a damn. They say, "Git drunk, boys will be boys, ha, ha, ha." In Chicago, it was that you were comin' to change the system, and the whole Establishment got up tight. . . .

. . . that same television set that showed you the hippies and yippies in Chicago, nine weeks after the Democratic Convention was over, that same television set showed you another crowd in the street that nobody got upset over. 'Course, they weren't "irresponsible kids," neither, and it wasn't Chicago. You remember that mornin' in New York City, 20,000 sick, slimy degenerates came out on Wall Street to look at a broad's titties. Nobody got upset over the titty-watchers. J. Edgar Hoover has yet to get on television and proclaim that titty-watchin' is definitely Communist-inspired.

What do you call 20,000 sick, slimy degenerate titty-watchers? Extremists, left to right. And if sister Francine is really sincere about not wanting to be watched in the mornings, all she has to do is understand how these old degenerates think. She should hold a press conference tonight and say, "tomorrow mornin' at 11:33, I'm goin' to get off that same subway wearin' one of the tightest sweaters ever been worn in the history of the world." And I guarantee you, tomorrow mornin' in New York City at eight o'clock, there will be 300,000 of them sick degenerates waitin' on her. And when she emerges out of that subway at 11:33 with that tight sweater on, if she sincerely don't want to be watched, have two signs across her bosom, one readin', "Free Huey Newton, Baby," and the other one, "Bring the Boys Home from Vietnam." And I guarantee you within two seconds' time, those 300,000 degits will be gone—back into their Madison Avenue offices to finish participatin' in their anti-trust violations. I say you youngsters got a big job.

You notice how today we try to make you youngsters think there's never been such an irresponsible young kid in the history of America. Well, it's not that we didn't do things; we just never did things to change the system. See, that's what makes you irresponsible. Bring tear gas out and throw on you, and you just keep comin'. Call the Army out, and you still don't behave. See, that's irresponsible. Never supposed to ignore that gun. . . . so we hope you young kids understand why us old fools in this country are so up tight. Now you youngsters want to tell us in America, that morality will no longer means a Brooks Brothers suit and a clean-shaven face and a haircut once a week. You must be out of your mind. You tell us morality will no longer mean gettin' the latest fashions from Paris and bathin' in Chanel No. 5, and havin' all the abortions you want, and you're still Mrs. So-and-So. You young kids are tryin' to tell us that morality will no longer come from without, but will come from within. You youngsters is tellin' us that we'll never be able to buy our morals in this country no more. That's why we're so upset with you . . .

Constitution or Capitalists

I do not advocate destroyin' the capitalistic system. I say to you kids you got to work like hell to beat the capitalists into their rightful position, and that is behind the United States Constitution, and not in front of it. Because as long as the capitalists are in front of the United States Constitution, that means in America, we will always put emphasis on property rights and there will be no emphasis on human rights. This country is not controlled by the United States Constitution, this country do not function under the democratic process. This country is controlled and governed by the capitalists. . . .

. . . In a nation so insane we demand that you get a prescription to get your medicine . . . you don't need a prescription to get your gun. Hell, I can't hit you in the head with my pills and kill you, nor can I injure you by throwin' my cough syrup on you. I'm not sayin' Americans shouldn't have guns. The Constitution says all Americans have a right to bear arms. But Americans have a right to get well, too. And if this country's goin' to make me go through some changes to get my medicine, then damn it, it should make me go through some changes to get my gun. . . .

. . . you better check out this system real quick. We live in a country today that tells you eighteen-year-old boys, "at 18 years old, you're old enough to go to war and die,

. . . it's sad I have to sit here and admit to you . . . until you make this country peep up through the muzzle of a gun, she's goin' to keep you a nigger . . .

but you're not old enough to vote." Any of you go along with that, maybe death is what you need. I meet so many young folks that say to me, "If I got to go to war at 18, I want the right to vote at 18." Don't be no damn fool. If you got to die at eighteen, you better fight to get the right to vote at seventeen. . . .

. . . You want the right to vote at 17 years old? You can get that. Don't be down here marchin', carryin' no flags, singin' all them old tunes. You want the right to vote at 17 years old, you organize across this country and after you get young folks organized, you go to the record industry and you tell them if they don't get to Washington, D.C., and lobby and within two months' time get a bill pushed through that says 17-year-olders can vote, you're goin' to call for a nationwide boycott on buyin' phonograph records for two years. What do you think would happen? Before they'd sit back and let you wipe out a multibillion-dollar-a-year industry, they'd let 16-year-olders vote. . . . You got a big job of movin' the capitalists behind the United States Constitution, because the capitalists have demonstrated time and time again they have a passionate disrespect for human rights. . . .

. . . you got to ask a lot of questions. And one question you've got to ask loud and clear is a simple question. That question is: If democracy is as good as we tell you it is, then why in the hell are we runnin' all over the world tryin' to ram it down people's throat with a gun? And the day you youngsters work to make this democracy work right for the first time, that's the day we can bring the guns home, because you see, anything good, you don't have to force on people. They will steal it.

. . . I hope you youngsters, as you work to change the system, you will spend a lot of energy to change the educational establishment, for the first time, make 'em live up to their name, educate. 'Cause the average school in America do not know how to educate, they been too busy indoctrinatin', and there's a difference . . .

. . . If you took a survey of all the colleges in America and took the names of all the people on the board of directors and looked 'em up and did research on 'em, you'd find out that 98 per cent of them cats are causin' all the problems on the face of this earth today. And the only thing that qualified them to be on the board of directors was because they made some money. Nobody even asked 'em how they made it. They don't know nothin' about education, and Lord knows, they don't know nothin' about you kids . . .

On Black Attitudes

. . . Few people seem to understand what the black students are talkin' about. Few people seem to understand what black folks is talkin' about in this country. . . . White folks is real up tight thinkin' we dislike you. You're so damn insignificant, we ain't got the time to dislike you. . . . We don't dislike you: we hate your stinkin' white racist institution. That's what we dislike and we're very up tight with you because you're responsible for it . . .

. . . Let me give you (an) example. If you came by my house and we was good friends and you brought your little daughter with you and my dog attacked your daughter, who you goin' to sue, my dog or me? Although I didn't bite her, right? But I'm responsible for that dog. You're responsible for this white racist system. Not that you are racist: you're responsible for the system because it's yours. . . .

. . . You know, I'd like you youngsters to do me a favor. . . . First chance you get, go by the library and copy down the Declaration of Independence . . . (and) when the riot season opens up again . . . I'd like for you to run home . . . and get your television set and put it in the middle of the room, and turn on the evenin' news, 'cause they're goin' to show them niggers riotin' and lootin' and sockin' it to the town. . . . At that point, run upstairs and get your mom and daddy and bring 'em down and put 'em right in front of the television set. Just let 'em look, look at the niggers burn the town. Just listen to their reaction, you've heard it before. Then when you've heard enough of it . . . go up and turn the sound off the television . . . (and) read your Declaration of Independence as loud as you can read it, and maybe for the first time, them fools will understand what they're lookin' at:

WE HOLD THESE TRUTHS TO BE SELF-EVIDENT, THAT ALL MEN ARE CREATED EQUAL AND ENDOWED BY THE CREATOR WITH CERTAIN INALIENABLE RIGHTS, THAT WHEN THESE RIGHTS ARE DESTROYED OVER LONG PERIODS OF TIME, IT IS YOUR DUTY TO DESTROY OR ABOLISH THAT GOVERNMENT.

. . . are you white folks really sick enough to believe you can put this stuff in our neighborhood and we're not goin' to read it and do what it says to? Are you white folks sick enough to believe you can still draft niggers into your army and send 'em down to Fort Benning, Georgia, and teach 'em how to be guerrillas and send 'em to Vietnam, killin' foreigners to liberate foreigners, and think they're not goin' to come back to America and kill you to liberate their mammy? Then you're sick and out of your mind.

. . . we got enough sense to know we can't stop white folks in this country from insultin' us, and we hope you get sense enough to know you can't stop us from reactin' to your insults ever again . . .

. . . after you get that Declaration out of my community, real quick, run and get that filthy white boy American history book out of my ghetto. 'Cause let me tell you somethin'. There's not a way in the world you can expect niggers to behave and keep makin' us read your history. Baby, your history tells me that from the time you landed at the Plymouth Rock, you shot and murdered your way all the way across to California. Are you serious? Do you really think you can give me that and think I'm goin' to behave?

. . . You know how insultin' it is when white folks in America ask black folks to be nonviolent? . . . The only country in the history of the world that's dropped a nuclear bomb on another human being is now askin' us to behave? Every mornin' you go out and drop napalm on women and kids and then you want us to behave? . . . You own the mightiest army, the mightiest navy, the mightiest air force, own all the police—state police, federal police, local police, sheriff's police, CIA, FBI—you own all them guns, then come to us (we don't own nothin'), and say, "Be nonviolent, boy." We say, "Yeah, you go to hell."

. . . Did you ever stop to ask yourself how many people on the face of this earth would be dead today if it were not for blood plasma? Are you aware of the fact that a black American by the name of Charlie Drew invented blood plasma? . . . Are you also aware of the fact that Charlie Drew bled to death in an Atlanta, Georgia hospital waitin' room after an automobile accident 'cause they didn't accept niggers? And you tell us education is our problem? The man who had the educational knowledge, the genius, and the wisdom to give blood plasma to the world died from the lack of his own invention 'cause his face was black, and education didn't have a damn thing to do with it. . . .

Hayakwa, Recruiters Cause Campus Turmoil

By MIKE DORFSMAN

Preparing for the demonstration against General Electric recruiting, the university administration will go to court Monday seeking an injunction against violent protest.

But the Student Council, after a joint emergency meeting Wednesday night voted to stop the injunction. The meeting was disturbed when three Boston Police appeared outside the meeting.

Yesterday afternoon, Council President Robert Weisman, Vice-President Frank Gerry and Secretary Mike Putnam met with the university's executive committee.

Weisman presented Dr. Asa S. Knowles with a statement explaining why the council believes the injunction should be stopped and condemns Dr. Knowles for not consulting the council as the elected student tepresentatives.

The statement concludes, "This action (the injunction) has placed the university in a position in which the likelihood of violent confrontation may well now be inevitable."

The council members believed possible alternatives were closed by not consulting the students. Additionally, the administration's action violated an agreement with the Council which said council's advice would be sought if prior knowledge of a demonstration were available.

The injunction prohibits John J. Fahey, Bruce W. Hershfield, Fredda E. Wieder, Phyllis Broker, Nancy E. Patten, Mark S. Alabaster "and all persons acting with or in participation with aforesaid defendants," from entering, congregating, occupying, assuming control and trespassing on parts of the university when forbidden by an addinistrator to do so.

The administration has already retained Boston Police to work under the jurisdiction of Northeastern, but if the situation warrants it, police, working under their own leaders will be called.

The defendants named, Dean MacDonald said, were chosen because they are members of Students for a Democratic Society and the University Committee Against Racism. There was no known effort to name conservative group members who might counter-demonstrate.

The Student Council, concerned about the possible violence, temporarily rescinded its support of GE recruitment at the special meeting.

Council Rescinds Recruitment Vote

By LENNIE GAMACHE

The Student Council in a special session voted to prohibit the General Electric Company from recruiting on campus at this time, a vote rescinding council's action eight days previous.

The meeting, held in the ballroom Wednesday night, was called as a result of developments which occurred this week, namely, the issuance of a restraining order by the university without the consultation of the Student Council.

Seven separate motions were passed, four by large majorities and the other three unanimously. The major motion, passed 18 to 10, demanded that the GE recruiter be restricted from the campus next week because the methods of controlling violence were determined by the university without student consultation.

A motion condemning the forceful removal of nonviolent GE union strikers from the campus, which occurred earlier this week, was passed unanimously in light of provisions in the Student Bill of Rights.

A second resolution unanimously approved, called for consultation with council in respect to any action concerning the use of Boston or other non-campus police or hired Boston police provided there is time for such consultation.

A third resolution unanimously approved, disassociates the use of the executive board of the student council and the student council's name on the President Asa S. Knowles Wednesday's message. Council members felt the reference to them in the president's remarks were totally invalid.

Council considered the restraining order and any subsequent injunction to be invalid and non-applicable to Northeastern students on this campus.

They further charged Knowles and his administrative assistants with violating a resolution and precedent set in May of 1969 providing for joint consultation with the Agenda Committee of the faculty senate and the executive board of the student council and the president of the University.

The council also specifically demanded that the administration not serve the injunction or restraining order.

The final motion passed cited "flagrant and persistent violations of the University Student Bill of Rights." It also called for disassociation with the administration's present policy toward injunctions and restraining orders.

Finally, council called upon the faculty and student body to join in a condemnation of the administration's irresponsible use of power if the stated demands are not met.

President Knowles was presented with the demands at a meeting Thursday morning with the Executive Board of student council.

After Wednesday's meeting, council president Bob Weisman (70LA) said, "The basic concept of these notions is that we want a revocation of the restraining order, after which the three sectors of the university students, faculty, and administration can meet and decide what action should be taken."

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY
Office of the President
January 21, 1970

To:
Members of the Northeastern Community

In a recent memorandum I reported to the University Community that certain young people, some of them identifiable as Northeastern students, indicated their opposition to recruitment by the General Electric Company scheduled for later this month.

It now appears from recent news articles and handbills posted about the University that a threefold attack against University activities has been planned for January 27-29. As indicated in the last issue of the Northeastern News, a group calling themselves the Northeastern Conspiracy is planning an action program, as follows:

1. January 27, 28—Against General Electric Recruiting
2. January 29—Against the College of Criminal Justice and the Law Enforcement Program at University College
3. January 29—Against Dr. Hayakawa, a scheduled speaker in the Distinguished Speakers Series

A call to action printed in The Old Mole, a radical student newspaper, and the appearance of professionally prepared handbills make clear that radical students from the Greater Boston Community are being called to a "joint conspiracy" against activities scheduled at Northeastern.

Last week when we realized the full scope of the proposed radical attack on the University and its legitimate programs, we scheduled a number of consultations with administrative officers of the University and the University's Legal Counsel. On Monday, January 19 a joint meeting of the Faculty Senate Agenda Committee and the Executive

Riots Follow Hayakawa's Speech

There were basically two incidents Thursday night resulting in 31 arrests, 15 policemen and an undetermined number of students injured, and $5000 damage to Northeastern property.

The first incident, occurring during Dr. S.I. Hayakawa's speech, began when students hurled rocks, billiard balls and bricks at the Ell Building. In some cases, the objects struck members of the detachment of off-duty, hired Boston police assigned to augment the campus security police.

The second phase, witnesses said, was unprovoked and occurred after Dr. Hayakawa's speech. Many students, in no way connected with the earlier demonstration, told the News of instances where police officers beat students indiscriminately.

The hired Boston Police called for reinforcements after they cleared the demonstrators from the quad shortly before 10 p.m., Dean Gilbert G. MacDonald, vice-president of Student Affairs, said the next morning.

The quad filled early Thursday night with students waiting for admission to Dr. Hayakawa's 8:30 p.m. speech. Because of the rumors about forged tickets, the Distinguished Speaker Series refused to admit ticket holders unless they had a Northeastern University ID card.

Dr. Hayakawa began his speech shortly before 9 p.m., the delay resulting from the extra security precautions.

But at 9:10 P.m., a rock thrown from the midst of the 2,000 demonstrators outside broke an Ell Building window above the heads of policemen guarding the building's entrances.

This initial action precipitated the clearing of the Ell Center steps. Police asked students to leave the steps and when their request was not heeded, they proceeded to push people down the stairs.

Police set up a wall of defense at the foot of the Ell and more rocks crashed windows of the student center's doors to cries of "Right on!".

One youth, about 16 years old, after encouraging two friends to throw rocks, urged them to "Go get some more."

The call went out to storm the Ell and the police readied their clubs behind their backs with their familiar elbow to elbow stance.

A number of girls from the crowd started a "Skipping" picket line which balked at the line of police and then mingled back into the crowd.

Close to 9:30 p.m. at the center of the quad the chant of "Plainclothes Pig!" was repeated over and over, and then "Get the Pig!"

A plainclothes officer wearing a black overcoat was pulled to the ground, beaten and kicked by a few demonstrators. A second plainclothesman was roughed up but managed to stay on his feet.

A half dozen police moved to the scene immediately, beat and poked the CONFRONTATION—Students and police exchange words on the quadrangle after S.I. Hayakawa's speech Thursday night. Other confrontations during the night were less verbal and more physical.

Strike Receives Little Support

A feeling of apathy prevailed on the quad yesterday at noon at the suggestion of a student strike. Leaders of the rally representing various political opinions spoke out again on what happened here Thursday night and what the student body should do about it. About 200 attended the rally.

They issued a plea that no one cooperate with the District Attorney in their investigation of Thursday's activities.

Some of the issues brought up were abolition of ROTC and the college of Criminal Justice, racism, the co-op system, and student administration problems. Finally, a day of protest, possibly for today, was generally agreed upon by a few of the leaders, but was not wholeheartedly accepted by the crowd.

The day of protest would not necessarily mean a boycott of classes, but a discussion of what occurred Thursday on campus. The purpose of the rally, they said, was to bring out the truth and to educate the student body.

Earlier, Dr. Asa S. Knowles issued a statement from his office detailing the events last week.

The statement said aggrieved students could receive legal aid from attorney Philip Boyd, in 139 Richards. Dr. Knowles' statement said a faculty member reported that the Weathermen planned to visit Northeastern Thursday armed with rocks. Dr. Knowles said students close to SDS confirmed the plans and added that the Weathermen planned to beat up Northeastern SDS members unless they became more militant.

About excessive police action, Dr. Knowles said: "Police called to the scene from other sections of the city may have had difficulty distinguishing between innocent students and those bent on destruction. Only a careful investigation will reveal all the facts of what happened in the streets adjacent to the university."

He was asked for the names of those facing charges from the demonstration, the names of the injured, both police and civilians, and the police department's side of the story.

Suffolk County Dist. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne announced Saturday that his office will investigate the incident which resulted in the injuries of 28 policemen and an undetermined number of students.

"Police officers are not second class citizens," Byrne said this weekend. "If they are attacked in the performance of duty they have a right to defend themselves. I will use every means at my disposal to protect these officers in qualling these student riots."

Two members of Byrne's office Jack I. Zalkind and Lawrence Cameron are handling the investigation.

Zalkind refused to discuss any matters of the case with the News referring to the canons of judicial ethics. "I don't want to say anything that might prejudice the case against the defendants," he said.

He said he was unaware of press statements in Monday morning's Globe. "I don't know where it came from," he said.

He repeated his refusal to comment when asked about reports in Saturday's newspapers saying the district attorney was investigating why police were not issued helmets and who was responsible for throwing rocks.

Capt. John Kreckler, of the police superintendent's office, also refused to discuss the case with the News Monday morning.

An Open Letter to the Student who Stole the Moon in Virgo Coffeehouse poster.

Dear Student:

The poster you stole was a project of a Boston Art student needed for credit at his school.

Like the photos stolen at the photo display and other art displays, you and others like you, continue to show disrespect for other people's work.

The Student Center Committee put a motion up to close the building because of thefts and vandalism like yours. (See the NU. News)

As a representative of the Ethnomusicological society (200 members) and as the manager of the Moon in Virgo Coffeehouse (over 800 people have attended) I am going to bring the mostion up again to close the Student Center to all day student functions including all student activities and the cafeteria for all of next week.

Only a small number of students are trying to make this university a better place to live. (like opening the library & Student Ctr. 24 hrs.) They not only have to fight school apathy, but also they are confronted with the fact that students like you are destroying their efforts.

The coffeehouse will lose over $200.00 when the Student Center is closed next week but the magnitude of thefts and vandalism must stop.

I hope your selfishness is satisfied and hope you enjoy the discomfort and inconvenienc you will cause 10,000 students.

People like you and those who witness these violations (they are just as guilty for not reporting offenders) should be thrown out of the university. It's either you or no more Art displays, no more Photo displays, or eventually no more Student Center Building.

Respectfully yours

Stephen H. Baird

Northeastern, the Co-op School

Work your way through college at a job relevant to your field. Graduate, and have two years' work experience to recommend you. Get your degree without having to go to class a "school year" at a time. Dodge the draft a year longer than other college kids.

The co-op system at Northeastern offered many things, including sometimes irrelevant jobs, sometimes coolie wages, and sometimes, an absentee co-op coordinator.

But it also offered the chance to learn the realities of a field that might have been glamorous only because of ignorance. It offered the chance to see professionalism, to experience it, perhaps even, to master it. For some of us, it meant the difference between being a college graduate and not being able to go; it gave the chance to leave college a step ahead of the four-year graduate, to leave an experienced professional instead of an inexperienced college kid.

It offered a job as an elevator operator and a toll collector, but it also turned out lab technicians, newspaper reporters, casualty claim representatives, legislative research assistants and, in one case, an experienced editor of a weekly newspaper.

For the radicals, co-op sometimes meant a haircut and conformist clothes. It fostered apathy and ruined the chance for school spirit, some said. But even for the radicals, even for the social dissenters, co-op brought the chance to learn about the establishment, the 'military-industrial complex,' first hand. You cannot change what you know nothing about.

In 1970, Northeastern is the largest cooperative institution in the United States, with 9,000 students alternating between school and the 2,000 member firms employing them. Most of the 4,500 co-op jobs are in Greater Boston, but 25 per cent of them offer positions around the nation and in several foreign countries.

Cooperative education began at the University of Cincinnati in 1906 when Herman Schneider set up a program in the belief that education is not limited to the classroom. Three years later, the Cooperative School of Engineering of the Boston YMCA (later known as Northeastern University) became the nation's second institution to offer co-op.

That year, eight engineering students alternated a week of work with one of school over the four school years. Today, students from eight colleges and the graduate school participate in the nationally-recognized program.

STRIKE!

On April 30, 1970, President Nixon announced that American troops in Vietnam were crossing the Vietnamese border into Cambodia, a nation whose government had recently been overthrown in a coup. The Cambodian government had granted no authority for such a move. Nixon told a national television audience that his action was necessary to "buy time" for withdrawing American forces which were being attacked by Vietcong guerrillas from their strongholds along the border.

What followed brought a new blot to the history of American dissent. Students participating in the national student strike that began immediately to protest Nixon's action were beaten, threatened and killed. Nixon called protesting students "bums" as National Guardsmen massacred four students at Kent State, Ohio. Two more students were shot down at Jackson State, Miss., and six blacks were shot in the back and killed by police in Augusta, Ga. In New York, construction workers under the aegis of patriotism beat and kicked protestors as police looked the other way.

The strike seemed triggered by a list of grievances against Nixon as the "neo-Nazi" course some felt the nation was taking. Members of Nixon's own cabinet spoke out against the Cambodian action; but student protest went deeper. It demanded an end to the imprisonment of Black Panthers for "political" reasons and an end to the kind of political repression that had been used against dissenters since the Vietnam War began.

At Northeastern, even the apathetic majority took part in the strike, perhaps because the faculty endorsed it. It took more than two weeks for students to calm down enough for Pres. Knowles to announce (above protests) that normality had returned. In the meantime, there were mass demonstrations and marches, a Molotov cocktail thrown into the Greenleaf building, and most unbelievably, a mass attack by 150 club-swinging Boston police on 300 students on Hemenway Street, an attack that included beatings of people inside their homes and the senseless smashing of property.

Special investigations followed the attack, and though the Boston press largely ignored the students' charges against the police, the New York Times and CBS did not. The university administration spent the last three weeks of that Spring term doggedly insisting the strike was over. But for many, the spectre of revolution seemed awfully close.

BEFORE THE HEMENWAY ATTACK students had frolicked in the streets around NU for three nights.

Shortly after midnight, May 11, police notified strike marshals that residents of the area had complained and that the street would be cleared in 25 minutes.

At 12:40, the charge came as 150 riot-equipped police ran five abreast and 20 deep down Hemenway Street yelling "Up the Pig, here come the pigs" and "If you think Kent State was bad, wait till tomorrow night" in response to students' anti-war chants.

After the first pass, the police regrouped, and charged again, this time smashing windows in homes and cars and clubbing bystanders. They entered buildings after smashing doors, clubbing residents (including a blind student) and smashing furniture, including that of an elderly German immigrant couple.

The NEWS expressed the feelings of many in observing that "when uncontrolled, police in this country are equal to the Nazi Gestapo." At least three investigations were launched in the wake of the attack.

PAUL MERMALSTEIN, a resident of Melvin Hall, was injured when police invaded his dorm.

SMASHED HEMENWAY DOORWAY. Witnesses said police "went crazy" in "terrorizing" the area. (Photo by Jean-Paul Cayre)

WATCH OUT FOR CABLES
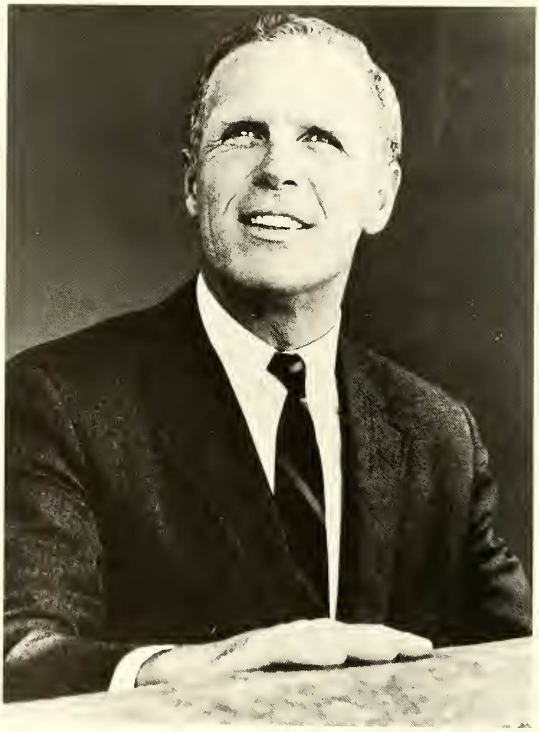
FLOOR



For several generations, Northeastern was known only as a law school, and more so, a "tech" school for engineering students. With the growth of the university came the desire to bring onto the campus notable speakers to discuss the issues of our times. Out of this desire came the Distinguished Speaker Series which pitted the dauntless wits of some of our best students against some of the most controversial men of the day.

A half a dollar a piece was not to much to pay to hear such men, some of whom investigating committees would have been glad to pay the cover charge to hear.

SENIOR CLASS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

As this yearbook was going to press, a bill, sponsored by Northeastern University Professor of Political Science Steve Worth (below), had just passed the Massachusetts Congress and was on the governor's desk.

The bill would disallow any Massachusetts man from fighting in an undeclared war, and, if such a bill was enacted, there would have been little time lost in making a case for the Supreme Court—at least in 1970. Time will tell.

1970: Protest Was Their Most Important Product

"I must say I've always admired the high level of intellectual life in Boston."
—Dr. S.I. Hayakawa

SDS spokesman Eric Mann at NU (Courtesy, Boston Record American)

It was 1970, and we were about to graduate. We were bored, some of us, and angry. The chicago Seven trial, a newspaper field day for five months, was still going on, and in Washington, Nixon was making state of the world speeches, hinting and winking about troop withdrawals, and nominating Carswell for the Supreme Court. In Boston, a legislative commission was saying first that marijuana ought to be legalized and, when that met with frowns, that the penalty for possession should be a fine instead of a jail sentence.

But the tumult that characterized our five years wasn't over. In January, students including SDSers took great exception to the General Electric Company's plans to recruit NU students on campus Jan. 27 and 28, and protestors started scribbling their picket signs.

Student Council voted to support the university's open recruitment policy until Pres. Knowles formed his violence control plans without consulting student government. At that, the council reversed itself, condemned Knowles' "flagrant and persistent violations of the University Student Bill of Rights," and demanded that the GE recruiter be kept from campus.

Seven resolutions passed the council, whose members were insensed by the university's request to the Suffolk Superior Court for a restraining order. The court issued an injunction barring six named students "and all persons acting with or in participation" with them from coming on campus when forbidden by the administration to do so, Knowles sent his files off for protection, called the Boston police to protect the "desires of the great majority of students," and the GE recruiter came and went without much incident.

But the GE incident was only a prelude to the Hayakawa riot, the first major outbreak of violence to hit Northeastern during the Class of 70's five years. Newspaper estimates of the number of protestors varied between 200 and 2,000; the police blamed the demonstrators and the demonstrators blamed the police for the violence. Hayakawa compared the New Left with Nazis and the New Left compared Hayakawa to Hitler; the Suffolk County D.A. investigated, and the grand jury indicted ten students, some of them from Northeastern despite Knowles' assurance that no Northeastern student was involved, though some might have been "swept up" in the confusion.

Hayakawa and the Dirty Deeds

It was Hayakawa's hard-line, as president of San Francisco State that brought out the SDS pickets against his speech in the Ell Center auditorium as part of the Distinguished Speaker series.

But as Hayakawa (and body guards) appeared on stage, the crowd outside grew restless, threw rocks, and "incited" the police into action.

The toll was $5,000 in windows, about 40 arrests, and several injured on both sides. The NEWS (whose photographers had their cameras smashed and stolen in the melee) interviewed some witnesses. Some of their comments appear on these pages.

"I can only describe it as a police riot."

—Dr. Robert Cord

". . . one of the policemen struck my right arm with a billy club, I think he was trying to break my arm."

—Malcolm Emory

"The first person brought in was accused of throwing rocks. He had six policemen drag him in, assaulted him by kicking him and punching him. The detective was beating him over the head with a blackjack as he was being handcuffed . . ."

—Daniel Rafferty

"If anyone was too slow, their reward was a crack on the head."

—Gerald Golden

There was a guy there with a motion picture camera. He was trying to take pictures, and the cops who veren't holding kids kept putting their hands on the lens . . ."

—Barbara Ferri, Richard White

'I was pushed to the ground. I got up after losing my glasses. As I was blindly stumbling around, I was hit in the back by a policeman and also pushed into the wall. I then proceeded to the parking lot where I found this fellow who had been clubbed over the head. He was apparently in a state of shock. I picked him up and we walked into the lobby of Stetson East where we tried to get help. I wanted to call an ambulance for him, so I asked the two men who were at the desk if I could use the phone. They said, 'No, you can't use it.' . . ."

This is where the editors are supposed to have their final say.

I would like to thank those people who sacrificed their time and energy to get their assignments done on time. Without them, this book would not be what it is.

Truly, Bob Flavell deserves much of the credit, for his time, talent and drive was a key force behind this yearbook.

And to those photographers, whose pictures we stole, and to the press bureau and Tom Sprague, thank you.

Finally to my wife, who put up with me, thank you, too.

I'd never do it again.
